EUROPE.

The Situation in Paris—An Extensive Conspiracy—Recognizance of Ex-Haussemites—Proceedings in the Spanish Parliament—Proposed Cancelling of Russian Reforms.

PARIS, Feb. 11.—The city is entirely quiet. There were no disturbances during the night, and the places of business were open as usual. The soldiers have not yet been returned to their barracks. The Police patrolled the streets in force, but did not find it necessary to make any arrests. Over 400 persons have been apprehended for complicity in the rioting during the three days past. The Magistrates are investigating the cases as rapidly as possible, and all those prisoners who are to be prosecuted further have been sent elsewhere for confinement. GUSTAVE FLOURENS is still at large.... The Moniteur Diplomatique to-day finds it necessary to deny the rumor that the French Government has complained of Prussia's nonfulfillment of the Treaty of Prague.

PARIS, Feb. 11—5 o'clock P. M.—The Police authorities profess that they have discovered an extensive conspiracy against the Government, and are actively engaged in searching for the parties implicated. A great number of arrests were made last night and to-day. It is stated that the editors of the Marseillaise and two editors of the Reveil were arrested on charges connected with the alleged conspiracy.....A policeman, in plain clothes, was shot and killed yesterday by a mechanic, whom he was endeavoring to arrest in his own house. The man has been taken into custody.... La Marseillaise reappeared to-day, and was eagerly bought on the streets....Several citizens were killed during the recent riots, and their bodies have been placed in the Morgue, but the Police refuse to give any details concerning them.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—In the House of Commons to-day Mr. TAYLOR gave notice that he should move for an inquiry into the deportation of South Sea Islanders. Mr. CHILDERS, First Lord of the Admiralty, explained that the recent cruise of the ironclads was undertaken with the intention of seeing how they would work together as a squadron. He said the adoption of the Whitworth guns by the navy was uncertain. The Postmaster-General, the Marquis of HARTINGTON, alluded to the proposed reduction of ocean postage between Great Britain and the United States, and expressed the opinion that it would result in a great increase of the mails and of the revenue therefrom. The House without transacting any business of importance, adjourned... As was expected, there has been a heavy flow of specie to the bank this week. The amount in vault last evening was £145,000 sterling greater than at the corresponding period last week....The Times urges that O'DONOVAN-ROSSA's election to Parliament from Tipperary be declared void.....The Times denounces the plan of the Chancellor of the Exchequer for redeeming the debt as the old sinking fund chimera, obliging the State to redeem at an increasing rate for a century to come.... The shore end of the Indian telegraph cable, taken out by the Great Eastern, has been landed at Bombay....The Papal authorities have permitted the restoration of horse-racing in Rome.

ROME, Feb. 11.—The Ecumenical Council, at the last two sessions, was engaged in the discussion of ecclesiastical discipline. That subject has been disposed of, and at the meeting to-day the subject of the Catechism was considered. Seven of the Fathers participated in the discussion.

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 11.—The Home Secretary, in view of the recent manifestations of popular discontent, recommends the Czar to cancel all the liberal reforms lately inaugurated.

MADRID, Feb. 11.—It is reported the Carlists are preparing for another insurrection. The authorities are watchful....In the Cortes during a debate on the naval estimates, Admiral QUESADO proposed that the ironclads be kept in the Naval Arsenals ready for use in case of foreign war, but not armed.

Admiral TOPETE, Minister of the Marine, replied that there need be no fear that he would ever use the navy to force a King upon the country.

CUBA.

New Campaigns Against the Insurgents Opening—General Puello Again to Take the Field.

HAVANA, Feb. 11.—Late intelligence received from Puerto Principe, is to the effect that General GOYENECHE, with a strong division, left that city on the 5th inst., on a campaign against the insurgents. It was expected that General PUELLO would soon leave that city to again attack the rebel forces....The steamship Justicia sailed for Philadelphia this evening.

Another Murder—The Greenwaldth Subscription—Tare of Sugars.

HAVANA, Feb. 11.—FELIPE VALDES was murdered here on Sunday night. A political complexion was at first given to the deed, but it has since been proved that the murderer was actuated by motives of private revenge.... Subscriptions for the family of GREENWALDTH are coming in freely. The Captain-General has subscribed $100....The recent agreement of the merchants to fix the tare of sugars at fifteen per cent. is disclaimed. The firms of MOZAN & SONS and VARANCHE & CO. announce that they will hereafter buy sugars without tare, paying therefor accordingly.

CANADA.

Opening of the New-Brunswick Legislature—The Crisis in Newfoundland—Postal Service—Pottstall Steamers.

ST. JOHN, N. B., Feb. 11.—The Legislature opened yesterday by a speech from the Lieutenant-Governor. His Excellency alluded in warm terms to the general prosperity of the Province. Measures to provide a general system of education and to secure a share of the emigration from England were strongly recommended to the attention of the two Houses.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., Feb. 11.—The difficulty between the Lieutenant-Governor and Parliament has ended by the latter withdrawing the name of Mr. BENNETT and proceeding to discuss a reply to the address in due form. The House, by deputation, will wait upon his Excellency to-day, and it is expected the resignation of the present Ministry will immediately follow.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 11.—The Post Office Department has decided to subsidize equally the steamers Algoma and Chickora, and thus secure a weekly summer service between Quebec and Fort William.

CORNWALL, Ont., Feb. 11.—Hon. JOHN S. MCDONALD, Minister of the Ontario Government, was nominated at a public banquet this evening. A large number of prominent persons were present. The affair was very successful.

BRANTFORD, Ont., Feb. 11.—EDWARD BLAKE, M. P. P., the leader of the Opposition in the Ontario Parliament, was ascertained by his constituents last evening, to stand the election.

STEAMBOAT EXPLOSION.

Two Lives Lost—The Maggie Hays Blown Up on the Mississippi—Narrow Escape of a Pleasure Party from Destruction.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Feb. 11.—A special dispatch from Helena to the Avalanche this morning, from Captain MATT GLASS, of the steamboat Commercial, says: "The steamboat Maggie Hays, from New-Orleans for Pittsburg, blew up at "Chute 62," near Helena, yesterday afternoon, killing Captain MARTIN, the second engineer and night deck hands. The second clerk, Mr. REESE, is badly scalded, but not fatally. The passengers are all safe; we have them and the balance of the crew on board the Commercial." Owing to the fact that the cable across the Mississippi here is not working, no further particulars have been received, but the Commercial, with the passengers, will be here this afternoon, when full particulars will be gathered and forwarded.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Feb. 11—Noon—Further advices from the Maggie Hays disaster report that the boat and cargo are a total loss. The remains of Captain MARTIN have been recovered. A pleasure party from Cincinnati were on board, all of whom escaped. The arrival of the Commercial, with the crew and passengers, is anxiously looked for.

Further Particulars of the Disaster—Sinking of the Vessel—The Loss.

MEMPHIS, Feb. 11.—A special dispatch from Helena to the Ledger says: Immediately after the explosion of the boiler of the Maggie Hayes she sank. The body of Captain BARNEY MARTIN was blown into the air, and was afterwards found in the hold. The second engineer, HENRY MCDERMOTT, was fatally scalded and died in five minutes. JAMES REESE, second clerk, was slightly scalded. Three deck hands and one fireman were killed outright. Other boilers were burned or blown into the river. The boat had on a light cargo of sugar, owned by BAR COUNSER and JAMES REESE, of Pittsburg, valued at $15,000. The first clerk had come here by rail from New-Orleans, and thus escaped. It is said the vessel's boilers were known to be defective.

Another Boiler Explosion—Several Persons Severely Injured.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Feb. 11.—One of the boilers of the St. Louis Rolling Mill exploded this morning, severely injuring SAMUEL C. WORT, THOMAS BARNES, JAMES GAMMON and DANIEL STEVENS, and slightly wounding several others. The boiler burst at the bottom, and there was but little water in it at the time, otherwise a terrible loss of life would have occurred, as about two hundred persons were employed in the mill at the time. The bricks of the furnace and pieces of iron and molten metal were scattered in all directions. No lives were lost.

THE SOUTH.

Death of a Dramatic Author—Executing a Negro Murderer—A River Steamer Adrift at Sea off the Georgia Coast.

RICHMOND, Va., Feb. 11.—Dr. CHARLES E. BRICKER, a well-known physician, theatrical lessee, and a dramatic author of some note, was killed to-day by the discharge of a pistol in his own hands. He was author of the "Cabin and Parlor," a play for a long time performed in the Southern theatres as an offset to "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

ALEXANDER GARDNER, a colored man, aged 35 years, was hanged at New-Kent Court House this morning for the rape and murder of Mrs. STEWART, and the murder of JOHN BAKER her colored farm manager. The prisoner last night confessed that, with JOHN KENNEDY, who afterwards made his escape, he agreed to murder BAKER. They found BAKER in a field, and KENNEDY shot him, and then went to Mrs. STEWART's house, and he (GARDNER) heard her crying and a few minutes after, KENNEDY came out, saying he had ravished and murdered her. They fired the house and burned her body, and threw BAKER's body in the river. On the scaffold, this morning, GARDNER only said, "I am not guilty. I don't know whether I am going to Heaven or Hell." A crowd of colored women who were around the gallows assailed him with cries of "Vengeance." The drop fell, and GARDNER died instantly.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Feb. 11.—A special dispatch received here to-day, states that the steamer Two Boys, from Dublin, Ga., for this port, exploded her steam drum when off Sapelo bar, and drifted to sea in the gale prevailing at the time. Her crew and passengers, excepting eight of the former, who swam ashore, were carried to sea in her. The United States steamer Nansemond will start in search of her in the morning.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Feb. 11.—A Convention of colored men will assemble in Frankfort on the 22d inst. A resolution, backed by a petition, was introduced in the House, offering the hall of the House of Representatives to the Convention. The resolution was referred.....A number of colored men have formed an association for the purpose of building a first-class steamboat to ply on the Mississippi River.

THE WEST.

The Distillers and the Forty-eight Hour Rule—The Woman's Suffrage Meeting in Columbus, Ohio—Travel Westward—The Chicago Artists.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Feb. 11.—Application was made to the Court of Common Pleas by the distillers of the Second District to restrain Collector DUELLAR from collecting by distraint the tax assessed under the rule requiring forty-eight hours for fermentation, instead of seventy-two hours, as heretofore. The distillers claim that the assessment is illegal under the provision of the Constitution that no one shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law. A temporary restraining order was allowed until Monday, when the application will be heard before Judge MUNDOCK....The Superior Court will on Monday decide the question of the Bible in the public schools.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Feb. 11.—The Woman's Suffrage Convention met in Houghton Hall at 10 o'clock A. M. After prayer by Rev. R. L. REXFORD, a series of resolutions was reported from the Committee, which set forth at length the reasons on which women found their demand for suffrage, and closed by asking the Legislature of Ohio to grant the right to them. Mrs. LUCY STONE BLACKWELL spoke for one hour in support of the resolutions, and many short speeches were made.

The Woman Suffrage Convention assembled this afternoon in the Senate Chamber. The audience was very large and enthusiastic. Speeches were made by Mrs. COLE, Mrs. STEWART, Mrs. BRADSHAW, LUCY STONE, Mrs. H. M. T. CUTLER and others. The majority of those in attendance are women.

CHICAGO, Feb. 11.—Travel from this city towards the Pacific is unusually heavy this week. The trains carry a greater number of passengers than ever before....Passengers from Montana report large quantities of snow on the western side of the mountains. On the eastern side less snow has fallen than for many years past....The Artists' Assembly reception at the Opera House last night was the most successful affair of that kind ever known in Chicago. About two thousand persons were in attendance. The collection of pictures was large and generally good. The entire Opera House was thrown open and elaborately decorated with flowers, and Cologne fountains placed in many places. The affair closed with a ball and supper.

TROUBLE IN UTAH.

Salt Lake Politics—A Meeting to Nominate a "Gentile" Municipal Ticket Broken Up.

SALT LAKE CITY, Feb. 11.—A mass meeting was called last evening at Walker's Building to ratify the nomination of the ticket in opposition to the orthodox municipal election ticket. An immense crowd was present, and the hall was crammed with orthodox Mormons. Before the hour of meeting no room was left for the opposition. The orthodox ticket was carried by acclamation. Much ill feeling prevailed on one side and unlimited hilarity on the other. The Tribune this morning publishes an opposition ticket, with H. LAWRENCE for Mayor, in place of D. H. WELLS. The election takes place next Monday.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT.

SALT LAKE CITY, Feb. 11.—The Gentiles and so-called Mormons of Salt Lake City called a meeting last night at the Godbeite meeting house, to nominate a ticket in opposition to the Church ticket. An immense crowd of Mormons, led by the Territorial Marshal and City Police, took possession of the hall and broke up the meeting. The Gentiles attempted to meet in another hall, but the Mormon crowd followed and forbade it. Much genuine alarm prevails among the Gentile portion of the Territory.

FLORIDA.

Lieutenant-Governor Gleason Disqualified for Office—The State Court Decision Sustained.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—The motion to dismiss the appeal—No. 320, WILLIAM H. GLEASON, Lieutenant-Governor of the State of Florida, vs. the State of Florida ex rel. the Attorney-General, error to the Supreme Court of Florida, was decided in the Supreme Court to-day. In this case the Supreme Court of Florida in quo warranto proceedings adjudged GLEASON not to be entitled to hold the office of Lieutenant-Governor of the State, because under the State Constitution he was disqualified by reason of his not having been a citizen of the State for three years. From that judgment, a writ of error was taken to this Court under the Reconstruction acts of Congress, and motion was now made to dismiss the writ, counsel submitting that the record in the case does not show that the Constitution or any treaty or law of the United States was violated by the decision below; and it is insisted that the right to hold the office was denied solely under the provisions of the Constitution of the State, and that there can be no pretence of right denied under any federal authority. For these reasons it is submitted this Court has no jurisdiction to review the decision.

A NEW PROJECTILE.

A Range of Eight or Ten Miles Expected—A Charged Conical Shot to be Discharged While in Flight.

FORTRESS MONROE, Feb. 9.—Mr. J. W. HILL, of Jefferson, Williams County, Iowa, has invented a double-shotted projectile, by which he claims a shot can be thrown a distance of eight or ten miles. Messrs. HILL and ROBERTS arrived here on Monday, with permission from Washington to make experiments. The shot is conical, with a bore inside and a time fuse at the side. In fact, it is a small cannon itself. An eight-inch shot fired to-day weighed 200 pounds before being loaded. The inner cavity or bore was three and a half inches, and extended some eight inches. Into this cavity was placed a half pound of powder; some tow was then inserted, and then a twelve and a half pound shot. The nozzle is stopped up by a brass plug in two pieces. The double shot is then placed in a cannon and discharged. The fuse are from five to ten seconds. At the end of that time the fuse ignites the powder and discharges the twelve-pound shot. The inventor claims that the velocity of the smaller shot is greater than was the large one, but that is a point to be determined. The experiments were commenced on Monday, but in consequence of the plug in the end of the shot not being screwed in, the plug and the ball both fell out after traveling about one mile. For to-day's experiment, however, the plugs were made to screw into the shot, and the result was satisfactory. The fuse to the eight-inch shot was a ten-second fuse, and at the end of that time the twelve and a half pound shot was discharged and the eight-inch shot kept on its way until its force was expended. The explosion does not burst the shot but drives out the plug, as there is no vacuum between the shot and the nozzle. This projectile has now been tested for the first time and is pronounced a success. The experiments were made by Colonel T. G. BAYLOR, commanding the arsenal at this post, and a full report will be forwarded to the Chief of Ordnance. The principle on which this improvement is made is regarded as a good one. Our fifteen-inch guns throw a solid shot at least five miles; load one of these guns with a double-shotted projectile, with a fuse arranged to discharge the small shot when the cannon ball has reached its highest elevation. A fifteen-inch shot would take a twenty or twenty-four pound shot without fouling the rifling, and it is claimed that it would go further from this elevation than it would from the ground. The large shot would, of course, be fired at an object, while the small one would be sent on to do what execution it could, and in firing at a time of great scattering it is very effective. The small shot is made with a sabot for the ride in the large shot, and is large enough to fill up the space between the powder and the plug, which is screwed in, but only just enough to keep it from being shaken out. Messrs. HILL and ROBERTS are entirely satisfied with the success of the experiments, and believe they can fire a shot almost any distance.

Paterson and Newark Railroad—Statement of the Stockholders Concerning the Difficulty—The Blame Attached to Fisk and Gould.

Various and conflicting statements regarding the suspension of the Newark and Paterson Railroad having appeared in the newspapers of late, some of which attached the blame to the local Stockholders, and others to the Directors of the Erie Railway Company, who are largely interested in the stock of the Newark and Paterson road, the following statement has been made by an ex-director on behalf of the local stockholders:

In 1868 a contract was made with Dr. J. H. GAUTHER & CO., of Jersey City, to build the road from Newark to Paterson for $400,000, payable one-third in cash and the balance in bonds and stock. The company commenced and kept on five months, their labor amounting to about $80,000, and the Company having meanwhile made cash payments for the same and furnished right of way, when the contractors failed and the Company purchased the contract. In the Fall of 1867 the Company entered into a contract with ROBERT B. CATHERWOOD, to build and equip the road from its terminus in Paterson to a convenient point in the City of Newark, so as to connect it with a road leading to the Hudson River, for $600,000, payable $300,000 in bonds, and $300,000 in stocks, CATHERWOOD to assume and pay the debts due the Company which amounted at that time to about $90,000 in cash and $80,000 in stock to GAUTHER & CO. In January, 1868, the contract was cancelled by mutual agreement, and a new one was made for $650,000, Mr. CATHERWOOD having done work to the amount of $9,000; the Company, however, paying $180,000 in bonds for the work done, and the payments which he had actually made, but had not paid.

In the Fall of 1868 CATHERWOOD entered into an agreement of partnership with JAY GOULD whereby the latter was to refund to CATHERWOOD one-half of the money expended up to that time, and one-half of all additional money for the completion of the road. The road was also leased to the Erie Railroad for thirty-five per cent of the gross earnings, which payment, in no case, was to be less than $80,000 per year, the Erie guaranteeing the payment of the principal and interest of the bonds.

In the Spring of 1869, the road having then been leased to the Erie, who were to run it, thereby rendering it unnecessary for the contractors to furnish locomotives and cars, which they had agreed to furnish, the Company entered into an agreement with R. P. CATHERWOOD & CO., by which they transferred to them all the cash in the bank (about $7,000) all money due on the subscriptions, and all unsold bonds and stock which might become issued on account of non-payment of subscriptions, in consideration of signing to $100,000, the contractors, on receiving it, agreeing to pay, or to see to pay for all right of way, or suits for, as well as all debts of the Company. About this time too, the Company gave to CATHERWOOD & CO. $150,000 in notes, in addition to the above amount.

WASHINGTON.

The Cuban Question in the Senate—Grewing Feeling in Favor of Cuba—The Appropriations in the House—Sectarian Attacks—The Senate on the Franking Privilege—Mississippi, Georgia and Naval Questions.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Mr. SHERMAN rolled up a drawy Senate this morning by the introduction of a resolution acknowledging the existence of a state of war in Cuba, and pledging the maintenance of a strict neutrality by the United States. The galleries became excited immediately, and, in a few minutes, the subject was agitating the couple of thousand people in and around the Capitol. The resolution, and the way speech in support of it, were entirely unexpected from Mr. SHERMAN. That gentleman very seldom gets on a fiery track, and when he rises nothing is expected from him but long columns of figures and disquisitions on internal taxation. Nothing of course was done with the resolution except to refer it to the Foreign Relations Committee; but it had the effect of drawing from Mr. SUMNER the official admission that the State Department is now considering the subject with, of course, a view to some action. This Cuban question is gaining friends in the Senate, and possibly something of importance may be done there in a short time. Mr. HOWE, for instance, has an important bill on the Neutrality laws, looking to a radical change in the foundation act of neutrality, on which he has already delivered a speech. Mr. MORTON entertains very strong and decided views on the subject to which he has given expression, and Mr. CAMPBELL is an enthusiast in his admiration for Cuba and all other struggling colonies seeking to be free. These gentlemen are strongly supported in their views by other Senators who have not yet made official announcement of their thoughts on this question. The Senate is usually a very conservative body, very slow to move in anything; but on this question of neutrality there is a very decided and concerted movement in favor of a bolder and more aggressive policy. The Cuban lobby has been literally starved out, and the lobby ceased a long time ago talking about the bonds of the Queen of the Antilles; but from present indications, we may soon expect to see and hear the Cuban champions as blatant as ever.

THE APPROPRIATIONS IN THE HOUSE.

The House hammered away at the Legislative and Executive Appropriation bill, but made very little headway. Sharp discussions occur on almost every item; and, wherever it is possible, they are cut down. The principal reduction to-day was in the item for folding public documents and the materials therefor. The House having done its part towards abolishing the franking privilege, the number of public documents will also suffer large reduction. This item was therefore reduced from $80,000, as heretofore, to $25,000. Mr. DAWES will press the bill hereafter without regard to the other business that may seek the floor.

NATURALIZATION.

The House Judiciary Committee at their meeting to-day, further considered Judge DAVIS' Naturalization bill. The section requiring Clerks of Courts to forward a certificate in each case for record in the Department of State, was discussed at length, and finally stricken out. The reasons for this action have not been ascertained, but it is to be regretted, as this feature would not only prove a great safeguard against fraud at home, but would be of inestimable use to American diplomatic and consular agents abroad, and would vastly increase the respect of foreign Governments for a certificate of American citizenship, which, under the present system, is simply of no consequence whatever.

THE SENATE AND THE FRANKING PRIVILEGE.

The Senate does not appear inclined to abolish the franking privilege. The question came up this morning for a short time, when there was a long discussion on the subject. The objection to the immediate passage of the House bill was very ingeniously covered by a pretence that the country papers would be seriously affected in their circulation. The debate on the numerous amendments offered to protect journals of this character had the effect of sending the bill over to another day.

THE TAX BILL.

The Ways and Means Committee formally took up the Tax bill to-day and began its consideration. Commissioner DELANO appeared and presented a large number of amendments, mainly to the working machinery of the law, which are the result of a careful revision of the act by the best legal talent in the Department, in the light of the experience obtained in its practical administration. As to changes in the rates of taxation, there will probably be no serious modifications, except in the Income tax, on which the Committee are believed to favor the President's recommendation of a reduction to three per cent. They will probably also propose the exemption of all incomes of less than $2,000, and the abolition of the house-rent exemption.

THE MISSISSIPPI BILL.

The regular order, which was the District of Columbia business, was postponed in the Senate to-day, by the casting vote of the Vice-President, for the purpose of continuing the discussion of the Mississippi bill. It may thus be seen where Mr. COLFAX stands on speedy reconstruction. It is absolutely incomprehensible why Senators should dodebate this question of imposing fundamental conditions on Mississippi, especially, when only two weeks ago, the subject was so thoroughly ventilated in the case of Virginia. Senators cannot possibly have anything new to offer on the subject, and their prolixity now must be set down to the account of personal infirmity and a desire to hear themselves talk. There was a long, tiresome wordy debate on the subject to-day, without result; it would undoubtedly have lasted to 6 o'clock or so had not the announcement of the death of Congressman HOPKINS, and the usual Congressional etiquette in such cases put an end to the matter to-day.

UTAH AND CONGRESS.

Dr. TAGGART, of Utah, appeared before the House Committee on Territories to-day, and gave his views in reference to the condition of affairs in that Territory, and the feeling evinced by the inhabitants at the action of the present Congress. Dr. TAGGART was satisfied that the provisions of the bill now under consideration in the Committee could not be carried out without the presence of a large military force sufficient to awe the people into submission.

THE CONGRESS ART GALLERY.

The Senate Committee on the District of Columbia agreed to-day to report in favor of exempting the Corcoran Art Gallery, recently incorporated in this city, from municipal and Federal taxation.

GEORGIA.

The Judiciary Committee of the Senate will take up the case of Georgia at their meeting to-morrow, and will hear the statements of one of the two delegations from that State at present in this city.

NORTH CAROLINA.

North Carolina politicians who have arrived here report that the prospects of a Republican victory there next Fall do not look very bright. The Legislature to be elected in November will have the selection of a United States Senator to succeed Mr. ABBOTT, and the politicians are already at work manoeuvring for the occasion, which will, of course, depend on the complexion of the Legislature. The Herald, the Cuban privateer, still lies in the port of Wilmington in the possession of the United States authorities. No protest action has been taken in her case, except an order for the sale of her movable equipment, tackle, &c.

PENSIONS.

Mr. REVERS, the Minnesota Senator elect, occupies, during the daily sessions of the Senate, a seat on the floor of the Chamber. He is still an object of much curiosity to the crowd of strangers, but there is a noticeable difference in the deportment of Senators towards him. At first he was petrified, and, as the saying is, "made scarce as a" generality; but now they treat him pretty much the same as they would any other stranger, taking no unusual notice of his presence. Among the prominent arrivals in the city are Hon. T. M. POMEROY, of Auburn; J. N. OWEN, NATHANIEL CHENEY and JOHN MACK, of New-York, and General GEORGE P. IHRIE, of Alaska.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

THE ALASKA SEAL FISHERIES.

In compliance with the resolution of the House of Representatives of Jan. 17, the Secretary of the Treasury has sent a communication to that body, giving information about the fur seal fisheries of Alaska, together with recommendations as to the best means of preserving them and securing a revenue therefrom. The act of July 27, 1868, was construed by the Treasury Department as designed chiefly to apply to killing the fur seals for trade, and instructions were issued allowing the natives to take a sufficient number, estimated at forty cents, to furnish an annual income to each native of $85 25. This permission authorized the killing by the natives on both islands of 42,217 seals in all. As to whether a greater number has been killed the Secretary says the evidence is conflicting, but he is of the opinion that at least 20,000 in excess of this number have been killed by the natives. All the skins which have been taken, however, still remain on the islands, which are in charge of the agents of the Government. The Secretary says that great care is necessary for the preservation of the seal fisheries; that the animals would either be destroyed or driven away if the business of capturing them or even the trade in the skins at the islands were open to free competition, and that such a course would not only be destructive to the business, but a criminal wrong to the natives, who have a right to their fisheries, at least to the extent necessary to their own support, and to whom the Government of the United States is bound to furnish protection. If the animals are protected, 100,000 skins may be taken each year without diminishing the supply. The proposition to lease the islands for a number of years to private parties, for an annual rental, he deems objectionable, because it would give exclusive control of a branch of industry important to the people of the United States. If the preparation of the skins for use should be transferred from London to this country, he proposes that the Treasury Department assume entire control of the business of the islands, establish a rigid system of military and naval police, exclude everybody but his own servants and agents, and carry on the fur and seal business with the natives by means of Treasury agents, the skins so taken to be sold by the Government at auction in San Francisco or New-York, and the profits, if any, to be applied to the educational and religious instruction of the natives, and generally for their intellectual and moral improvement. He states that the expense of maintaining the military and naval forces under this plan would not be much greater than at present. In accordance with the foregoing recommendation, he suggests that the Secretary of the Treasury be authorized to appoint agents to superintend this business, and that an appropriation of $100,000 be made, out of which the natives shall be paid for the labor performed by them, and the other expenses incident to the business shall be defrayed. In conclusion, he urges immediate legislation, as the season for operations will soon begin.

NOMINATIONS.

The President to-day went to the Senate the following nominations: Passed Assistant Paymaster George L. Meade, to be Paymaster; Passed Assistant Paymaster William H. Woodhull, to be Paymaster; Commander Jonathan Young, to be restored to his signal position; Assistant Naval Constructor John W. Easby, to be Naval Constructor; Hon. P. Wilson, of Pennsylvania, to be Consul at Mataneras.

REVENUE RECEIPTS OF THE YEAR.

The official statement shows the receipts of internal revenue for the year ending with December, from all sources, were from:

New-York—With the exception of the December returns from the First and Thirteenth Districts for that month, $80,000,000, of which nearly $8,000,000 were from spirits, and over $7,500,000 from tobacco.

Pennsylvania—Aggregate, $17,000,000; from spirits, $4,200,000; tobacco, $2,700,000.

New Jersey—Aggregate, $3,000,000; spirits, $800,000; tobacco, $400,000.

Ohio—Aggregate, $10,500,000; spirits, $3,[illegible]; $45,000; tobacco, $225,000.

Kentucky—Aggregate, $9,000,000; spirits, $6,000,000; tobacco, $1,300,000.

Illinois—Aggregate, $15,300,000; spirits, $8,000,000; tobacco, $1,700,000.

Indiana—Aggregate, $4,000,000; spirits, $2,000,000; tobacco, $325,000.

Virginia paid, with the exception of the Second and Third Districts, for December, $4,325,000, of which amount $351,000 was received from spirits, and $3,203,000 from tobacco.

Returns from all the other States and Territories are given, showing the aggregate of $187,192,000 from all internal revenue sources.

THE GEORGIA SENATORS.

JOSHUA HILL and Dr. MILLER, formerly elected United States Senators from Georgia, are still here, and will present their credentials at the proper time. Should the Legislature elect other Senators, it will rest with the Senate to determine which two are entitled to admission. The President has taken no side in the controversy regarding Georgia politics, as he regards the settlement of the question as resting with Congress. There seems to be no doubt he has full confidence in the representations of General TERRY.

THE GOLD PANIC.

The Committee on Banking and Currency have only one more witness to examine, and will make their report on the New-York gold panic towards the close of next week.

REVENUE BUREAU.

Commissioner DELANO received a telegram this morning announcing the seizure of the large distillery, rectifying house and vinegar factory of J. KINCHOW & Co., in Chicago. The telegram states that the frauds are heavy, and the proofs complete.

AN OBNOXIOUS DOCUMENT IN SEMINARY.

The documents, for the franking of which the Legislature of Tennessee censured General SMITH, member of Congress from Memphis District, were the reports of the Superintendent of Education.

THE NATIONAL THEOLOGICAL INSTITUTE.

The Board of the National Theological Institute and University, at a meeting held here today, declared that the representations in the recent telegram from Boston, to the effect that Rev. Dr. TURNEY and his associates are seeking to get possession of the charter and have powers granted by it transferred to them, to be untrue. They set forth that they have always had possession of the charter, and have been uninterruptedly exercising the powers granted by it.

NAVY.

Lieutenant-Commander FREDERICK MCCOOK is ordered to the Congress. Second Assistant Engineer JOHN LOWE has been detached from the Kalamazoo and ordered to the Pinta. The orders of First Assistant Engineer A. V. FRAZIER have been revoked. Lieutenant-Commander J. CONTRERAS WALKER has been detached from the Congress and his resignation has been accepted, to take effect Aug. 10 next.

EUROPEAN NEWS BY MAIL.

ARRIVAL OF THE STEAMSHIP CITY OF WASHINGTON.

The steamship City of Washington, which left Liverpool Jan. 29 and Queenstown Jan. 30, reached this port last night. Her advices are later by three days than those at hand by the Minho.

On Jan. 24 a public meeting, convened by the Workingmen's National Emigration Association, was held in the Lambeth Baths, Westminster road, London, for the purpose of promoting emigration with the aid of the State, and for the resettling of the colonies. The meeting was numerously attended. Sir C. GREY, late Governor of Victoria, occupied the chair. Letters were read from various gentlemen, expressing their sympathy with the object of the meeting, and their agreement in a petition got up by the Association, and which is in course of signature. Among these were letters from Mr. ALFRED TENNYSON, the poet laureate, who said: "I cannot believe that Ministers entertain for a moment the suicidal policy attributed to them. Rather would I think that they are occupied, even among the weighty affairs now so especially pressing, with that vital question, how to make England and her colonies one, body and soul." Mr. FROUDE said: "I greatly fear that nothing any of us can do will arrest the course on which the so-called Liberal Party in this country have so determinedly entered. We are governed just now by the great monoyed classes, whose fixed idea is cheap labor, and they dread and shrink from anything which threatens to promote emigration. They are as blind as Hyrnas. The English nation is to go to the devil that their business may not be in danger of being curtailed. The history of the world can produce no parallel to such preposterous folly." Mr. J. STUART MILL said separation from the colonies would be a great shock to the English people. He thought it would be a disadvantage, and he would do nothing to encourage it, except to tell them that they must be at the charge of any war of their own. There were also letters from Mr. RUSKIN, the Duke of MANCHESTER, Lord LICHFIELD and Mr. T. HUGHES, M. P. A meeting to promote the objects of the Colonial Emigration League was held on the same day at the Mansion House, the Lord Mayor presiding.

The welcome which has been accorded to the Archbishop of Syra and Tenos since his arrival in England had been crowned by a banquet given to his Eminence in Jerusalem Chamber, at Westminster, under the presidency of the Dean. The room being small, only forty guests were invited.

Messrs. ROTHSCHILD have been authorized by the Russian Government to negotiate for a loan of £12,000,000. The bonds will be issued in sums of £20, £100, £500 and £1,000 each, with coupons payable half-yearly. The price of issue is 65 per cent. The object of the loan is stated to be the development of the railway system in the Russian Empire.

The London Times of Jan. 28 believes that, should the annexation of San Domingo to the United States prove successful and peaceful, we must expect after a few years to see the Western Republic of Hayti follow the example of its sister and rival, and the whole country organized as a territory of the United States. "There will not be in England," it adds, "the least desire to hinder the Americans from exercising the wish of their hearts in the establishment of a colony or dependency. Whether it be worth their while to take upon themselves this new work at such a time is another question. Were the Presidents and people of the two mixed Republics to petition the British Parliament to admit them into the Empire, there would not be the slightest chance of their prayer being heard. It may be that the Americans will be able to manage the islanders better than we should, but one cannot but think that they have at present sufficient territory to administer and a sufficient population of the African race. To deal with four and a half millions of population lately delivered from slavery, and still for the most part in the deepest ignorance, is a difficult problem, and there is enough to show that it will not be readily solved. If the Government of the United States still further complicate their task by accepting the government of other colored communities, they may find that, for the present at least, the inconvenience outweighs the advantage. But there need fear no jealousy on the part of Great Britain."

It appears from a letter published by the Reveil, that M. LEDRU ROLLIN prefers not to appear before the High Court in the name of the Noir family. He says: "To my first impulse succeed political reasons, and once reflection my mind has been beset by a formidable objection. Can I recognize such judges without denying my past conduct? In the previous of my return to France I never thought of resuming practice at the Bar. I could not, in virtue of the oath taken every year by the Counsel in the name of the Order, endorse the responsibility of so many odious laws; which oath, at the very opening of the proceedings, the President would remind me of, and to which an obligatory sign of assent would bind me. Does any possibility exist that, after having submitted to twenty years of exile, rather than amnesty by my presence these degrading judges, I should be indeed to plead before them, and again under what circumstances! They are created into an exceptional tribunal, a chambre ardente, without any one being allowed to dispute their competence, as no jurisdiction is superior to theirs! My blood revolts at the idea. My long abstention and my position at present would be a striking contradiction, which would only be too gratifying to the Government and its judges." M. LOUIS BLANC, in reply, declares that he thinks M. LEDRU ROLLIN has formed a correct judgment of the position.

"A little plot," says the France, "is said to be in course of organization at present in certain politico-literary circles to get the Duke D'AUMALE made a member of the French Academy at one of the next elections."

The Reveil says: "M. FELIX PYAT, borne down by four successive condemnations, (seventeen months of imprisonment,) three of which judgments are retrospective and contrary to the most elementary principles of right, as also to those of non-retro activity and of non bis in idem, refusing to recognize the justice of the present liberal regime, has returned to exile."

The Augsburg Gazette publishes the Latin version of an address drawn up by Cardinal RAUSCHER, Archbishop of Vienna, in the name of several Prelates, praying Pius IX. not to submit to the Ecumenical Council the question of the Pope's infallibility. The document calls attention to the fact that the Council of Trent limited the efficacy of the sentence of belief which the faithful must repose in the Pontiff's authority, and declares that all Christians should faithfully observe them. But if, on the one hand, learned and pious men teach that which His Holiness decides ex cathedra respecting matters of faith is indisputable, even without the consent of the Church being in any manner indicated, on the other, we must not forget that in admitting this opinion there are great difficulties arising from the words and acts of the Fathers of the Church, handed down to us in the authentic records of history. The argument reserved for the conclusion as being most telling is that the definition of the power asked for would lend fresh weapons to the enemies of religion, to excite even notably good men against the Catholic Church, and would give, at all events to European Governments an excuse for encroaching on her revelation rights.

The Bavarian painter KAULBACH had lately on show at Munich a picture representing the horrors of the Inquisition. He has now been forced to discontinue the exhibition in consequence of numerous anonymous letters declaring that the work would be damaged if not immediately withdrawn.

In the renewed debate on the address in the Lower House of the Austrian Reichsrath, Jan. 26, the Minister of the Interior, Herr GINSKA, made a speech explaining the views of the Government. He protested his reluctance by stating that the present provisional position of the Ministry had upon him the necessity of a certain reserve, was to their character as Deputies the members of the Cab HANDBUCH DER VERGLEICHENDEN STATISTIK DER VOLKERBESTANDE UND STAATENKUNDE—FUR DEN ALLGEMEINEN PRAKTISCHEN GEBRAUCH. Von G. Fr. Kolb, &c. Fünfte umgearbeitete Auflage. Leipzig: Verlag von Arthur Felix. New-York: L. W. Schmidt. 1869. pp. xx. 634.

The fact that a work of this kind, treating its subjects, as it does, in the driest possible manner, should in the course of twelve years have reached a fifth edition, is a proof at once of its usefulness and of the field which existed for it. The reviewer of a volume of statistics is hardly bound to peruse the whole of it, still less can he be expected to verify all the numbers and statements. What he has to do is to study the plan and execution of the work, to see whether the facts adduced support the conclusions drawn from them, and to point out, if such occur, false methods and principles of induction. It is one thing to accept as accurate a series of facts, another to admit the justice of a general judgment claiming to be founded thereupon. All facts imply so much more than is apparent on the surface that it is exceedingly difficult to get at the full significance of a single one. The implications of a fact are usually of ten times more consequence than the fact itself, and it is only the shallowest kind of thinking that views facts out of their connection. A stone that did not gravitate would not be a stone at all, and matter without cohesion would be an impossibility. There is nothing isolated in the world of phenomena or in the world of thought; indeed, there is no isolation in the universe, and any person who ever imagined that there could be any fact, that is, any effect, without a cause, must have been capable of thinking a contradiction in terms. Now statistics are collections of facts, each of which has a cause, and they are useful just in so far as they enable us to discover precisely what that cause is; beyond that, they can do nothing but satisfy a vain curiosity. As soon as the true cause of any series of facts is discovered, we have usually the formula whereby we can construct the statistics for ourselves. Now that we know the cause of solar eclipses, we can tell the periods of their occurrence from now to the limits of either eternity. The number of statistics, moreover, which were necessary for the construction of the theory of eclipses was not great; on the other hand the phenomena were not complicated or their conditions numerous. Indeed it is just in proportion to the complication of the conditions under which any class of phenomena takes place, that their cause is difficult to find and the accumulation of facts bearing upon it necessary. COMTE's well-known hierarchy of the sciences, if not in all respects a perfect generalization, is certainly an arrangement of them on the scale of ascending difficulty and complication. It begins with mathematics as the most general and simple, and ends with sociology as the most particular and irreducible. It is probable that, even in geometry, the facts were established by actual observation long before they were proved by logical demonstration, but yet no number of cases showing that the square described upon the hypothenuse of a right-angled triangle was equal to the sum of the squares described upon the other two sides could ever have amounted to a demonstration, or imparted to us any real mathematical knowledge. For the mere generalization of facts already known is of no value except as an aid to the memory, or unless it is accompanied by the further process of coordination in a higher known law. Everybody knew before Sir ISAAC NEWTON's time what proportion of all ripe apples, left ungathered, would fall to the ground, and any person could have readily enough made a generalization on the matter. Would such generalization have added anything to human knowledge? No; but it was a considerable addition when NEWTON, after asking himself why one apple should fall at all, found a reply which proved a key to all the mechanical motion in the universe. Empirical knowledge—and all knowledge is founded originally on empiricism—is of about the same value to us as it is to the lower animals, which are also capable of making generalizations; our knowledge is superior to theirs only when we become convinced that the facts of empiricism are the necessary results of the fundamental laws of the universe, in which there is nothing at all contingent. As SCHELLING says: "For the very reason that Nature is a system, there must be a necessary connection for everything that happens or comes to pass in it, in some principle embracing the whole of Nature."

It thus appears that the knowledge derived from a book of statistics is knowledge belonging to the very lowest stage—that it is, in fact, a catalogue raisonné of things we are ignorant of. For we can be said to know a thing only when we know it in its cause, and with that statistics have properly nothing to do. Take, for example, the case of crime; the statistics of which lead to results that have caused a good deal of surprise, but which need not have done so at all. We learn that the amount of crime varies but very slightly from year to year; that in a given community the number of murders committed annually is very much the same. By itself this is a very barren piece of knowledge. It would not in any case help us to diminish the amount of crime; whereas, if it led to the inference that the human will was essentially destitute of freedom, it would show that crime could not be diminished at all by human agency—a very unsatisfactory result. On the other hand, it does not require very much philosophy to enable one to arrive at a better result independently of statistics, and to see at the same time a reason for it.

It is supposed by one class of philosophers that if it can be shown that there is a very close approach to regularity in the actions of men, a proof is at once furnished of the unfreedom of the will. The book before us does not expressly declare for this conclusion; on the contrary, it admits the freedom of the will within certain narrow limits, but does so in such a manner as to show that the author profoundly misunderstands the whole question of will. It is true that one can, within certain limits, do whatever he wills; about that there has never been any real question. But can any one will whatever he likes, or can he will to will anything at all?

But statistics have their use, and in the absence of knowledge, a catalogue raisonné of the things we are ignorant of is not to be despised. This book has been compiled with great care, from the best sources within the author's reach. It includes statistics geographical, climatic, ethnological, political, financial, educational, military, industrial, commercial, criminal, &c., of all the civilized countries of Europe and America, with a few facts about China, Japan and other outlying regions. Germany, of course, comes in for a large share of attention, 203 out of 616 pages being devoted to it; Great Britain gets 53; France, 54; Russia, 29; Italy, 30; Spain, 37; Turkey, 10; United States, 30; Mexico, 2. The work contains the only full and correct information we have seen in regard to the States of Germany as affected by the war of 1866.

This volume may beforehand recommended to all persons interested in statistics, to students of social science, to physicians, to army doctors, to teachers, and above all to librarians. It is the handiest and most comprehensive book of statistics we know.

LIFE DUTIES. By E. H. MARCY, M. D. Boston: Lee & Co.: New-York.

Dr. MARCY, who is known to his own profession as an able and authoritative writer, has in this volume stepped outside of its technical pale, and essayed to be doctor to mind as well as matter. It cannot fail to be interesting to know what a physician of long distinctly with the phases of man's bodily and organic needs, has discovered concerning his inner life and sentiment. Dr. WHATELY states it as a fact that physicians are generally unbelievers, and gravely insinuates the reason why it should be so. The physician sees good men and bad, alike suffering from fleshly infirmity, and alike amenable to the debt of nature. When his patient lies with the death rattle in his throat, the doctor asks nothing about creeds or modes of faith, but, finding himself bound to account for what other people style "mysterious dispensations of Providence," by merely material data, it would perhaps be strange were not his own faith in such "dispensations" somewhat relaxed.

Dr. MARCY, however, as a sincere and earnest Christian, believes that men have soul duties other than to their bodies. He has indicated them here with a vigorous pen, and actually succeeded in making a very readable book about them. "Life duties," says he, (page 133,) "may be divided into two distinct classes—those pertaining to the material world and those connected with the spiritual world. In the first class are comprised the necessities and requirements of the physical organism, the rearing and support of the family, the maintenance of government, &c.; and whatever may be thought of Dr. MARCY's religious tenants, which crop out occasionally when treating of his second class, his views on those above enumerated are timely and sound. His idea of the summit of human health is the vision of JUVENAL, "mens sana in corpore sano," (not by any means "mens sanus," as somebody—we are sure it cannot have been Dr. MARCY—has spelled it, on page 153.) His ninth chapter, "Duties Towards the Physical Man"—as is not unusual in a physician's book—is to our thinking the best in the work, although the following chapter, "Duties to the Spiritual Man," is written with all the earnestness of conviction, and possesses more than a passing interest. "Life Duties" is a treatise for the million, as well as for the Christian and physician, and will give pleasure and instruction to most who read it. In these days of literative romances and meretricious literature, a writer is to be commended who, possessing a spirited and ready pen, turns it to subjects as vital as they are neglected—and treats of our duties to God and man in a book that can be consulted by an inquiring mind without its owner holding a Thesaurus in one hand, and HARPER'S Dictionary of Philosophy in the other.

VERBESSERTE PRAKTISCHE ANSPRACHE METHODISTISCHER ENGLISCHER SPRACHFEHLER. KURZESTER, BEST, LEICHTESTER UND SPRECHER ZU LERNEN. Von JOHN L. APPLETON. Boston: Carter, New-York: WILLIAM GRAHAM. 1869. pp. 64.

This little book, which the bad taste of its dedication is enough to condemn, attempts, by means of a phonetic alphabet, to impart to Germans a correct English pronunciation. We have no fault to find with the idea, but must say that it has been carried out in a way that would teach a pronunciation anything but correct. A man must surely be destitute of the sense of hearing who can deliberately say that the o in come sounds like the o in the German kommen or the e in the French le. When he says that it sounds like the u in gun he forgets the function of a after g. English sounds cannot in all cases be represented by German letters, and it is foolish to attempt so to represent them. It does not help the matter to invent a new English alphabet, and then explain to Germans the sounds of it by means of their own alphabet. But it is not merely in the pronunciation that this book is false and misleading; the grammatical rules are often the reverse of the truth, and the English is often detestable. For example, we are told that "Little is often compared regularly, little, littler, littlest; or, A little, smaller man." The book is altogether a catchpenny, and can be of no use save to waiters or couriers.

LES BRIQUES DE L'ART: Architecture, sculpture, peinture, et gravure. Par C. FALLET. Boston: E. G. UNDERWOOD. New-York: LEYPOLDT & HOLTZ, and F. W. CHRISTERN. 1870.

It is a generally admitted fact that in schools where one body of the pupils study ancient and another modern languages, the latter are always found, at the end of their course, to be inferior to the former, both in culture and information. A partial explanation of this fact is, that modern languages are far from being as good an instrument of culture as the ancient. But this is not the entire explanation. The students of Greek and Latin read the Greek and Latin classics, while the students of French and German read the merest rubbish that can be written in these tongues. The plea for this is, that students of French and German want to learn to speak those languages, and, therefore, must be made acquainted with the ordinary conversational phrases. Did anybody ever know of a boy or girl who learned to speak French or German at school? We never did, and are certain that boys and girls learning these languages will take more interest in their work, acquire more information, and obtain a better culture, if their reading be confined to the classical works, instead of being limited to books written expressly for educational purposes by inferior men. To the latter class this book, we are SORRY to say, belongs.

OUR NEW VICAR. By Rev. J. S. B. MONSELL, LL.D., Rural Dean and Vicar of Kildare. Fourth Edition. London: RIVINGTONS & DALDY. New-York: PUTNAM & ARMOR.

In this series of letters between an English squire and his clerical friend, the doctrines and practices of the English Church are set forth, and those which Dr. PUSEY and his followers have revived or introduced are specially commended, and their value and utility exhibited. The book is very well written, and will be particularly interesting to those who sympathize with the Church of England in what is called the "Ritualistic Revival," the main features of which its author heartily approves and thinks beneficial to the Church.

VITAL RESOURCES. By JERSEY KIDDER, M. D. New-York: Published for the author.

Dr. KIDDER has attempted in this book to establish a system which has the advantage of affording an easy explanation of some of the deepest mysteries of man's existence. There are scarcely any questions of greater interest than the nature of the mysterious connection between what we call mind and the material form; and Dr. KIDDER brings forward a number of remarkable facts to sustain his ingenious theories on the subject, and to prove that their practical adoption will aid in the moral and physical improvement of the human race. Much care and labor have apparently been expended in collecting materials for this work. The chapters which treat of mental and emotional phenomena, of hereditary influences, marriages of consanguinity, epilepsy and insanity, of the diseases of mind and body, of the important matters of education, and of the duties of parents, will be read with interest by those who are interested in the subjects treated of, and who, in the line of their avocations, are called upon to deal with the minds of others. We shall not discuss, nor cannot consent with, the theories of Dr. KIDDER, but we dissent from him—if any such there be—that COLERIDGE was wont to say, "There are errors which no wise man will treat with derision, but they should be the reflection of some great truth yet below the horizon."

A TREATISE ON THE LAW RELATING TO BANKS AND BANKING, with an Appendix containing the National Banking Act of June 3, 1864, and Amendments thereto. By JOHN T. MORSE, Jr., of the Suffolk Bar. Boston: Little, Brown & Co. 1869.

No exhaustive and trustworthy book on this subject has hitherto been produced by an American writer. Yet it is certain that such a treatise is imperatively demanded, and that the complications arising out of our anomalous currency and the peculiar relations of State corporations with the National Government tend always to augment the inconvenience wrought by the absence of a dependable manual. Mr. MORSE has striven to produce such an one. In view of the difficulty of working without precedents—English books on the topic being almost useless in this country—he modestly deprecates any expectation of finding his essay complete or without faults. He, however, adds that that imperfections should exist in his work may be regarded as inevitable. These propositions taken together are not without ambiguity, but we can testify to the good quality of the matter which follows. Mr. MORSE has attached his subject with industry and ability, and has produced a work that will be profitable to the profession and to himself. The volume is noteworthy because it constitutes, as we have suggested, the first treatise on banks and banking published here, and moreover because it is an able as well as a unique composition.

LES PETITES FILLES MODELES. Par Mme. de SEGUR. Et Les Gottons de la grand'mère. Par Mme. E. CARRAUD. With a list of difficult phrases. Boston: S. R. URGUHART. New-York: LEYPOLDT & HOLTZ, and F. W. CHRISTERN. 1870.

This is a collection of goody tales for children. It is intended for a school book, but we hope no teacher will be foolish enough to buy it. It will probably find its way into convents and Catholic schools, where little girls are educated to be model grandmothers. French schools teem with such thoughtdrowning, milk-and-water books, and the result we know. Here is a sample:

Sophie—Thank you, dear Camille, for giving me courage; but every time I compare myself with you and Madeline, I find you so much better than I am.

Madeline, (kissing her.)—Quiet, quiet, my poor Sophie; you are too modest; isn't she, Margaret?

Margaret—No, I think Sophie is right; she and I are far from being equal to you.

Camille—Oh! oh! oh! What modesty. Brave, my little Margaret, she are more humble than I, and therefore you are better."

LETTER AND SPIRIT. Winchester Lectures. By RICHARD METCALF. Boston: American Unitarian Association.

The author has undertaken, in thirteen brief lectures, to set forth the doctrines which are believed by Unitarians. The task is a difficult one, and has not been accomplished perfectly in this little book. Mr. METCALF commences with a chapter upon creeds, in which he reaffirms the Unitarian opinion that creeds are not essential to religious organization or life; and then, in the following chapters, seems to deny his own position, by doing the best he can to systematize one of the differing forms of belief which Liberal Christianity has assumed a definite and special statement of belief respecting God, Christ, the Holy Spirit, day of judgment, salvation and similar themes. The work is marked by sincerity and thorough conviction, though quite deficient in Scriptural proof and conclusive argument. It is written in a charitable spirit towards opponents, and may do something to promote harmony of belief among those who admit no written creed, and yet hold similar opinions upon religious subjects.

The Indian Troubles on the Plains.

From the St. Louis Democrat, Feb. 5.

Our people on the frontiers have been very anxious regarding the probability of Indian troubles the coming Spring. Recently the agent of the Arrapahoes gave that tribe permission to leave their reservation, and visit Fort Dodge, Kan. This was refused by the commanding officer of that post, and the Indians went into camp near the Canadian River, about forty miles from Dodge, and while they were in fancied security the Pawnees came down upon them in the night, and at one a swoop carried off all their animals. Information from General AUGUR, received yesterday at headquarters in this city, is to the effect that his troops have retaken nearly all the horses, and we presume they will be returned to the Arrapahoes. This must have a good effect upon them.

Satanta, the most dangerous leader of the tribes in the Indian Territory, has left the reservation with his band of Kiowas, and a short time ago captured and took off a herd of cattle en route from Texas to Camp Supply. It was with great difficulty that he was prevented from killing the white men in charge of the herd, and their safety was mainly due to Kicking Bird, another chief of the Kiowas, who has heretofore been looked upon with suspicion. This Satanta is the same Indian in last part of the century, and undoubtedly means mischief. It is probable he may involve his people in war as soon as the season is favorable, for they will undoubtedly treat as a mere amusement war involving other tribes. He must be put down, and we understand that the military authorities, if they have to take the field, will—as they should—inflict summary punishment upon him and his tribe.

General SCHOFIELD will do all in his power to prevent Indian outrages in this department. We learn that the cavalry are kept in readiness to take the field at a moment's warning, and will be stationed as to prevent, so far as their limited number will permit, all injury to the settlements. If these Indians do not, they will be sharp, severe and unmanageable. The Indians should be dismounted and disarmed. The old policy of treating with these tribes as with independent nations should be changed and the Indian dealt with as dangerous savages, to be taken care of by the Government as its wards, the better. Somebody does, and always will supply them with powder and ammunition, as long as they are permitted to carry them; and our people will be subject to their ravages until they are disarmed and kept on reservations.

We believe Satanta will do ch retrparsu. General SCHOFIELD is a capacious and prompt commander, but, had he all of the army of the United States in this single [illegible] of Indians, he would be forced to do what good and active [illegible]

COMMUNICATIONS.

The Sale of Tickets at Niblo's Theatre.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I noticed the communication from "Fair Play" in the Times of Friday, and think I can make even a stronger statement than he did. I was the first person on the line, having waited over an hour for the opening of the ticket office. On inquiring for seats in the parquette, I was informed that they had been sent to the Press; then, asking for seats in the first circle, was told that Mr. PALMER'S family had taken them. At the same time many persons were seen passing in and out of the side door of the ticket office, and seemed to be supplied with tickets. G. K.

NEW-YORK, Friday, Feb. 11, 1870.

[The Treasurer of Niblo's writes that "Fair Play" misstated facts—that the theatre does not receive a single cent from ticket speculators beyond the regular advertised price; and that it is impossible to prevent speculators from obtaining some of the tickets. Mr. SUSSMANN, however, does not meet the point. "Fair Play" complains, if we read his letter aright, that tickets for the best seats are turned over to the speculators before the advertised time of sale, and before the public have had a chance to purchase; and the letter we now print more than sustains "Fair Play's" statement.—TIMES.]

Forced Deposits with Gas Companies.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Are gas consumers required by law to furnish working capital to the gas companies? I am a manful moderate means, with a large family, who require more house room than the former are quite equal to at these times. I own the house in which I live; but that the Metropolitan Gas Company does not consider good security for its monthly claim of from three dollars in Summer to twelve dollars in Winter, which it makes for its very bad gas. Upon the pretext that I may run away and it must be secured for two months' supply of this bad gas, it has compelled me to deposit $30 and to pay five cents for a stamp to its own receipt given for the same. The use of this money at seven per cent interest it insists upon. I am not a solitary case, and thus the Company are supplied with a working capital from four to eight times its receipts. Was this the intention of the Legislature when it chartered the Company? Is it law?

Customs House Circling.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Allow me to inform you that I have been a cartman in New-York City for nearly thirty years, doing business for importing houses. My employers requested me to call at the office No. 71 Broadway, and see under what circumstances I could procure a license to do their carting. I was informed that I could obtain a license, providing I complied with the rules. I asked the official to inform me what was necessary. He told me I must pay a percentage for the support of the carting department, or if I failed to perform this part of my contract, my license would be revoked. Is this right or just? My merchants own about seventy-five per cent of all goods imported by them; the Government about twenty-five per cent. My merchants are willing to give bonds for my faithful performance of the twenty-five per cent portion, as they have had a long trial of me. They require no bonds for their seventy-five per cent portion of the goods.

AN OLD CARTMAN.

The Horse that Sheridan Rode.

From the Port Huron (Mich.) Times.

Among the heroes that Port Huron sent to the war was ARCHIBALD P. CAMPBELL, who went from this city as Captain of Company K in the Second Michigan Cavalry, and succeeded Phil. SHERIDAN in the Colonelcy of that famous regiment, though, we believe, the eagle on his shoulder straps was displaced before his death by the General's star. While in camp at Grand Rapids, Captain CAMPBELL wrote to his friends, E. J. DRAKE, Esq., of this city, requesting him to purchase a horse that was large, well formed, and capable of great endurance. Mr. DRAKE, one day in our streets, happened upon such an animal, the property of a man living back of Lakeport, in this county, and after a careful examination, and thorough tests, purchased him for $175. Mr. DRAKE describes to us the animal destined to be so famous in history, as a dark well-made horse, fifteen or sixteen and a half hands high, of powerful frame, very fast known, or what some would term blood, color, and four years of age. He was shipped to CAMPBELL, at Grand Rapids, who received his purchase with great satisfaction. He rode him during the entire period of the war, and John improved in appearance, with the good treatment and care he received. He became a favorite in the regiment, and was, indeed, a noble-looking steed. General SHERIDAN often expressed a wish to buy him of his friend CAMPBELL, who, however, refused to sell him. Afterwards, he offered to give General SHERIDAN, but at just what time the present General SHERIDAN, are unable to state, as CAMPBELL's comrades in this city differ in regard to the time and place, one person fixing it at Franklin, Tenn., in April, 1864, and the other at Dandridge in the Winter following. The first time SHERIDAN rode him in an engagement was at the battle of Cedar Creek, where the behavior of the horse under fire was all that could be desired. From that time he became his favorite horse until the ride from Winchester, which gave to both steed and rider names that will be immortal in history.

The War Claims of Kentucky.

From the Louisville Courier-Journal, Feb. 8.

The report of Quartermaster-General HAWITT has been published. It gives a concise recapitulation of the military condition of the State during the year ending Nov. 30, 1869.

In regard to the war claims of Kentucky against the United States, he says that there was, at the date of his last annual report, an unadjusted balance of $1,337,543 15 due the State. During the past year another installment, the twelfth of this claim, amounting to $27,288 49, has been made up and forwarded to Washington city, making a total of $1,364,831 64. Upon this sum the United States has a credit of $11,302 49, paid Aug. 12, 1869, leaving a balance still unadjusted of $1,353,529 15. There are yet in the Quartermaster-General's office vouchers amounting to a little over $17,400, which are being paid off under appropriations made in accordance with the provisions of the acts of Feb. 17, 1866, March 3, 1867, and March 16, 1868, and which will go to increase the claim of the State by that amount. The law makes our State agent at Washington City, the intermediary between this office and the General Government, and upon his energy and efficiency depends, to a very great extent, the prompt settlement of this claim; but unfortunately, this officer has been, on account of the extremely precarious condition of his health, unable, during almost the entire year, to give that constant and energetic attention to the duties of his position, in default of which all that may be done by General HAWITT avails but little.

THE METHODIST BOOK CONCERN.

Proceedings Concerning the Recent Investigations of Alleged Frauds.

Report of the Minority of the Committee—Resolutions for Exonerating the Majority.

Yesterday we published the fact that the investigations by the Book Committee, of the alleged irregularities said to have occurred in the management of the Methodist Book Concern, had been concluded. The report of the majority was prepared on Thursday evening, and its verdict was as follows:

1. On the question, "Is respect to the management or conduct of the agents, or either of them, has there been any fraud or corruption in the Concern?" the Committee were unanimous in giving an answer in the negative.

2. On the question, "Has there been any unfair treatment or corrupted the process of bidding of any employe in the Book Concern for the printing department is concerned?" the Committee voted eleven in the negative, two of the Ministerial members declining to vote.

3. On the question, "Has there been anything fraudulent or corrupt in the practice or conduct of any employe in the Book Concern in respect to the binding department?" the Committee fully deliberated, and decided in the negative by a vote of nine to four.

These questions, in the estimation of the Committee, were the most serious charges made against the Concern, in public and private, and in the settlement of them every item in gravity affecting the Concern was most fully investigated. The Committee could not say otherwise than that the testimony not only failed to establish the existence of fraud, defalcation or corruption, but otherwise failed to sustain the charges of fraud. The Committee could not, in justice, say otherwise than that the Concern has been increasingly prosperous, and that its affairs have not been mismanaged, it appears, by any other religious publishing house in the world; and that it is now in a sound and healthy condition, and under such a system of checks and safeguards as guarantee its security.

AMOUNT OF THE REPORT.

The minority report was not completed until yesterday. It reads as follows:

WE, the undersigned members of the Book Committee, respectfully dissent from the report of the majority adopted yesterday, for the following reasons:

1. Because nothing has come before us during our present session to relieve our consciences of the grave charges against the Book Concern so insufficiently expressed in the Committee's report in November last.

2. Because, from testimony before the Committee, it appears that the book agents, for a series of years, purchased a very large part of their paper from or through a middleman or paper broker, who represented himself to paper manufacturers as controlling the purchase of paper for the Book Concern, and whose relation to one of the agents gave special credibility to his representations, and who also represented himself to the Book Concern as the secretary, agent, or confidential broker for others. This method of purchases appears to us discreditable, and, almost of necessity, damaging to the house.

3. Because the testimony before the Committee shows that this system actually was damaging to the Book Concern. The agents have bought paper from or through the Jewett middleman, paper to the amount of nearly $600,000; from him direct about $200,000, through him as broker about $300,000. The "statement" of the assistant agent to the Committee, contradicted, as it is, by documents drawn from the books of the dealers referred to, and also from the order-book of the printing department of the Methodist Book Concern, clearly shows that on sales to the Book Concern, amounting to $24,600 16, between July, 1867, and August, 1868, the profit accruing to the above-named "broker" was $6,028 94; and that during the same period his commissions on purchases made from paper dealers amounted to $3,040 28. Between August, 1868, and June, 1869, he received from those two houses commissions amounting to $6,768 55 on paper ordered directly from the Book Concern. We give these as specimens only, not pretending to say what was the whole amount of profits and commissions on the entire sum of nearly $900,000. But we append the following letter, showing that, in one case at least, a profit of 40 per cent was charged:

NEW-YORK, Jan. 26, 1870.

Rev. J. LANAHAN—Dear Sir: In reply to your inquiry, we have some Good paper sold to Mr. Edmund in June, 1867, 15 reams of 1 lb. paper at 14 cts., twenty-seven cents per pound, 3 reams at 16 cts., twenty-five cents per pound, amounting to $27 27. We find by referring to Mr. Gormerly's order book, that he sold this paper to the Methodist Book Concern at thirty-five cents per pound, amounting to $1,[illegible] 24, leaving a difference of $[illegible] 67, showing a profit of over thirty per cent.

4. Because it was in evidence before the Committee that all the manufacturers and dealers whose testimony was given, have sold to the house directly as cheaply as they sold to Mr. J. F. PORTER, with a partial exception in the case of ——, as stated in the letter below.

The following letters form a part of the testimony:

NEW-YORK, Nov. 18, 1869.

DEAR SIR: We would say, in answer to your inquiry as to whether we would have sold the Methodist Book Concern the paper which we did through Mr. PORTER, between the 1st of September, allowing the Methodist Book Concern the discount which we sold to Mr. PORTER, and these orders come to us direct instead of through Mr. PORTER, we would have allowed the one cent a pound to your Society, as we do now. The amount of Mr. PORTER's profit, and a half per cent addition, which we finally allowed and paid to him, we did under protest, feeling that it was Mr. PORTER getting an undue share of the profit, and we only did it to keep along with the business, knowing that the time would come when we could break up the infamous system, and curtailing and others (and get rid of Mr. PORTER) could go along with your Society, as we had formerly done before Mr. PORTER came upon the field of action, and in the same manner as we did our business with our other large customers.

Rev. JOHN LANAHAN.

BOSTON, Oct. 25, 1869.

JOHN LANAHAN, D. D., New-York—My Dear Sir: On ask in your letter of recording whether from July, 1867, to July, 1868, I made other sales of paper than those have sold paper to the Methodist Book Concern at the same price I sold to Mr. J. F. PORTER, if by agents of said Book Concern, or their employes, had applied to me in person?

Reply—I know no reason why, under the same circumstances, I should not have sold paper to me to the Methodist Book Concern as to Mr. PORTER.

The following is an extract of a letter dated Dec. 22, 1869:

"The letter to which Mr. GORMERLY refers is probably the one written by me in which I said that, under the circumstances, I would have sold paper to the Book Concern direct as to Mr. PORTER. By this I meant that I had no motive for making low prices to Mr. PORTER that would not have existed had the agents of the Book Concern been my customers."

NEW-YORK, Jan. 25, 1870.

Rev. Dr. JOHN LANAHAN—Dear Sir: In reply to your inquiry whether we should have furnished the Methodist Book Concern the paper sold to Mr. PORTER, and upon the same terms, we have to say, we should most certainly have done so. Respectfully,

[illegible]

5. Because no evidence in rebuttal of the above statements was laid before the Committee, except to the effect that the pa

THE LONG ISLAND MORMONS.

Interesting Discussions Concerning the Salt Lake Doctrines—The Arguments of the Mormons and Those of Their Opponents.

The citizens of Freeport and vicinity during the past week have been greatly excited by a series of lectures explaining Mormonism, delivered by Rev. T. W. WARD, and also a lecture vindicating their principles by Miss CHARLOTTE and Wm. W. RITER. Mr. WARD delivered a lecture Monday evening at Rockville Centre, Tuesday evening at Baldwinville, Wednesday evening at Freeport, and last evening at Westbury. The last evening's lecture was a repetition of the Freeport lecture given by special request. The lectures on both sides have excited much the same interest in Mormonism being delivered in the Methodist institution in the Centre, and in the Masonic institution in the Centre, and in the Hotel in Freeport.

Mr. WARD only advocated the cause of the Latter-day Saints from the first organization of that Church; exposed the criminality of JOSEPH SMITH and Brigham YOUNG; and, instead of throwing aside the Bible and substituting the Book of Mormon, with believing that God is a man and the Holy Ghost a kind of electricity; with teaching that there is a female God, and that women have to bear, but that after Heaven is a succession of men; that there are two kinds of marriages—one for life only, which does not unite the parties in eternity, and another for time and eternity, which is respected in Heaven, and that BRIGHAM YOUNG is sent by power to make these eternal marriages.

Mr. RITER, a backsliding Mormon, made some grave charges against the UTAH Saints in connection with Mormonism. Many Mormons during the entire lecture a Mormon delegation was present, and were greatly excited at the charges made against their brethren, speaking all the allegations, and offering to prove the contrary.

On Thursday evening, at the Mormon gathering, the hall was filled with a large number of strangers, many of the first citizens of Freeport. Elder FROM DE JACKSON, in vindicating polygamy, stated that if God commanded Abraham to do a thing, that this doctrine should be practiced by a large number, or else in a short time the world would be miserably earnest. He stated that in New-York City there were 30,000 more marriageable females than males; that in New-Haven there were twelve ladies who have prayed as an earnest prayer, for embracing the marriage vows, and yet could not find a suitable husband; that in Salt Lake City, with 30,000 inhabitants, there was not a single prostitute; that in New-York City, where this peculiar institution was condemned, and within the hearing of five hundred church bells, could be found twenty thousand young women who lived by prostituting themselves. The speaker said that the large preponderance of females in our country made a life of toil or of shame necessary for them, unless polygamy is practiced. This speaking was very violent against those who opposed Mormonism, and especially against Mr. Mark W. W. RITER followed in a more liberal spirit, and evidently made a better effect on the audience. The Latter-day saints are attempting to get the permanent possession of a had nearer Hempstead village. During the coming week a number of meetings will be held in the county and also in Suffolk County.

(b) The prolongation of the game was useless after White's last move, he forced the exchange of rooks and remained with the superiority of a piece against a pawn, which Black could not win.

BRENZINGER vs. TODD.

The following game, which forms part of a little match between the above-mentioned players, in which Mr. BRENZINGER gives the extraordinary odds of rook and knight, and rook pawn I move alternately, occurred yesterday at the Brooklyn Chess Club, and exemplifies Mr. BRENZINGER's brilliant style of play when opposed to a comparatively weak antagonist.

Several local articles, specially written for the TIMES, will diversify the usual Sunday readings.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

EUROPE.

In Paris no disturbances occurred on Thursday night, and yesterday the shops were open as usual. About four hundred persons are in prison awaiting examination for complicity in the insurrection. The troops are still held in readiness for an emergency. FLOURENS is still at large, and is believed to be in Belgium. The French Police profess to have discovered an extensive conspiracy against the Government, in which the editors of the Marseillaise and Reveil are implicated. A policeman in plain clothes, in attempting to arrest a mechanic in his own house, was shot dead by him. Several citizens were killed during the disturbances, and their bodies are exposed at the Morgue. La Marseillaise reappeared yesterday, and was eagerly bought up.... The Russian Home Secretary, in view of the existing popular discontent, has recommended the canceling of all the recent reforms.... The Carlists are said to be preparing another insurrection in Spain.... The Ecumenical Council has disposed of the question of ecclesiastical discipline, and the Catechism is under consideration.... In the House of Commons the Postmaster-General alluded to the reduced postage to the United States, and predicted increased mails and revenues from the change.... The specie in the Bank of England has increased $145,000 in the past week.... The Times urges the declaration of the Tipperary election void.

CONGRESS.

In the Senate yesterday a bill providing for the enlargement of the Capitol grounds was passed. A resolution offered by Mr. SHERMAN, to recognize the Cubans as belligerents, occasioned considerable debate, and was finally referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations. The bill abolishing the franking privilege was discussed during the morning hour, and then laid aside for the bill providing for the admission of Mississippi, which was also discussed for some time, but not disposed of. A message was received from the House announcing the death of Representative HOSKINS, of Wisconsin, whereupon brief remarks were made by Senators CAMERON and HOWE, after which the Senate adjourned until Monday.

In the House but little business was transacted. A petition was presented against the enlargement of the West Point Academy. Several bills were introduced, the most important to provide for a further reduction of the army, and looking to the better protection of the Government in the purchase of naval supplies. Resolutions were adopted calling for a report of the expenditures, &c., of the Freedmen's Bureau, and for the aggregate expenditures, public and private, in the District of Columbia since the foundation of the Government. In Committee of the Whole, the Legislative appropriations were again considered. A number of points were debated, but no amendment adopted reducing the item for printing House documents from $50,000 as proposed, and the same item in the Senate from $40,000 to $20,000. After the Committee rose, Mr. CRAPO, of Wisconsin, announced the death of his colleague at his home, this city, the announcement being followed by eulogies by Messrs. BANKS, WASHBURNE, of Illinois, and LAWRENCE. The usual resolutions were then adopted, and at 5 P. M. the House adjourned until to-day.

THE STATE LEGISLATURE.

In the Senate, yesterday, bills were reported to amend the charter of the New-York Individual Life Insurance Company, so as to apply to policy holders. Among the bills introduced was one authorizing Brooklyn to borrow money to meet deficiencies and liabilities, and one providing for the introduction of the European system of taxing railroads. A resolution authorizing a reduction of canal tolls, if necessary to retain trade, was laid over under the rule. Several bills were advanced in Committee of the Whole, and the Senate adjourned to Monday evening.

In the Assembly the report of the Committee on Grievances in favor of commencing Judge PORTER, the District-Attorney and the Sheriff of Saratoga County, before the bar of the House for a breach of its privileges in arresting a member, was adopted and the offending persons ordered to appear on the 14th inst. and be censured. The bill allowing the Hackensack and New-York Railroad to extend their track to the Hudson, and that chartering the Carpenters' and Joiners' Association of New-York, were passed. The House adjourned to Monday night.

GENERAL.

Advices from Puerto Principe say that General GOYNEDA had left there with a strong force on a campaign against the Cuban insurgents.

The New-Brunswick Legislature opened on the 10th inst. The Lieutenant-Governor in his speech spoke warmly of the general prosperity of the Province, and recommended measures to promote education and to secure a share of the emigration from England.

The difficulty between the Lieutenant-Governor of Newfoundland and the Parliament will probably result with immediate resignation of the Ministry, the name of Mr. BENNETT having been withdrawn by the representatives as the proper person to form a new Cabinet.

The Woman's Suffrage Convention at Columbus, Ohio, resumed its session yesterday.

The artists of Chicago gave a reception at the Opera House on Thursday night, at which two thousand persons were present. The collection of pictures is said to be large and unusually good. A supper and ball closed the festivities.

The Missouri House of Representatives, on the 10th inst., passed a resolution debarring officers controlling school funds from making a discrimination in the salaries of teachers on account of sex.

The "Gentiles" called a meeting in Salt Lake City for Thursday night, to nominate a municipal ticket in opposition to the "Orthodox" ticket, but the Mormons filled the hall, according to one account, and changed the result of the meeting. Another account says they broke up the Gentile meeting by force.

The House Committee on Intoxicating Liquors of the Massachusetts Legislature has reported a license bill suppressing public bars and tippling shops, and allowing innkeepers and victualers to sell liquor to their guests to be drank on the premises, and grocers, apothecaries, &c., to sell liquor not to be drank in the premises, with fees from $100 to $1,500.

A special to the Memphis Avalanche says the steamboat Maggie Hays, from New-Orleans for Pittsburg, "blew up" at Chutte No. 63, near Helena, Ark., on Wednesday afternoon, killing Captain MARTIN, the second engineer and eight deck hands, and badly scalding the second clerk, Mr. REESE. The passengers escaped uninjured. The survivors were taken to Memphis by the steamboat Commercial.

LOCAL.

A petition, signed by between three and four hundred residents and property owners in One Hundred and Twenty-ninth-street, protesting against the Flak concrete pavement now going down on that street, was sent to the Board of Health yesterday. The petitioners ask the Board to interfere and stop the work, as many of the residents of the neighborhood are now dangerously ill from the exhalations of the composite matter. The Board took prompt action on the subject.

Five prisoners were arraigned for sentence before Recorder HACKETT in the Court of General Sessions, yesterday, one being sent to the State Prison for five years for using a pistol on a policeman while the latter was in the discharge of his duty.

Mr. GEORGE MACKENZIE, agent in this City for the General Transatlantic Company, received yesterday a dispatch from Halifax, announcing that the Ville de Paris came into that port Thursday night, her Captain deeming it prudent to take a supply of coal before proceeding further. The voyage has been prolonged by stormy weather. The steamer will leave this afternoon, and be due at New-York on Sunday. All are well on board.

In the Brooklyn Court of Sessions, yesterday, E. T. BRANDRETH, charged, together with WM. F. HOWE, with several forgeries for small amounts, pleaded guilty, and was sentenced to the Kings County Penitentiary for four years eleven months and twenty-nine days. HOWE, who had been released on bail, has fled.

A Word to Governor Hoffman and the Legislature.

A contemporary points out that a citizen might have all his fortune invested in the stock of the Erie Railway, and yet possess no more control over his property than the man in the moon. The Erie bill passed at the last session of the Legislature is denounced as indefensible, and its repeal is called for in a short but pungent article. The journal which writes in this manner is not on our own side of politics, as most people might suppose. It is, in fact, no other than the World—which, to use a common phrase, has somewhat "astonished the natives" more than once within the last week or ten days. Readers of that paper must have rubbed their eyes very often lately, and looked to the top of the page to make quite sure that they had bought the right article.

If Democrats of the better class—thoughtful and honest men—only take the same line as our contemporary, we may hope to see a great fraud swept out of the way. Senator GERRY's bill for the repeal of the Erie act would pass in any assembly of men who cared a cent for the public interests. Public opinion has denounced that infamous measure all over the country. It is everywhere admitted to be a device for enabling a few men to plunder all who have the misfortune to be associated with them in a great undertaking. This one bill has brought more discredit upon the Legislature of New-York than any scandalous transaction in which a legislative body was ever involved. It has made everybody who is known to have had a hand in it a by-word. Its effect even on the persons in whose interest it was passed, have been bad, for it has encouraged them to accelerate their pace on the downward road until they must now begin to see the bottom.

When Senator GERRY's bill is brought up we shall find out all the black sheep at once. They will be in favor of trickery. But men who have any decent pretensions whatever will feel themselves bound to vote for the repeal of the disgraceful Erie act. They will rather in have no constituents of worthy to [illegible] as a fair. As for the Governor, he ought to crave earnestly for the passage of this bill. It will give him one chance of standing before the world without a stain upon his character. He has had a sharp experience. Things have been said and written of him which undoubtedly he would have regarded with a kind of horror when he first entered upon public life. Even now the friends of the Erie dictators boast that he would not dare to sign a bill repealing the act under which they have victimized so many thousands of honest men. We cannot undertake to decide whether they are right or wrong. Governor HOFFMAN has disappointed all expectations that were formed of him once, and it is not impossible that he may do so again. But if he refused to sign Senator GERRY's bill, he might as well bid farewell to public life forever. He never could reëstablish himself in public confidence. It would be the turning point of his life, and to his last hour he would have cause to rejoice or to repent over the course he had taken in that crisis.

Let us have this bill passed without delay. We will undertake to report all willful obstructions to it, and to explain to the authors of those obstructions the estimation in which they will be held throughout the civilized world.

Legal Tender—The Supreme Court Decisions.

The recent opinion of the majority of the Supreme Court stands in direct hostility to the uniform tenor of that great series of acts and measures which were required to destroy the rebellion. Singularly enough, it is the decision of an unfriendly Court of a State which stood on the brink of disloyalty which has been affirmed, and in effect the numerous decisions made in support of the act throughout the North are reversed.

Although the present Chief Justice, who rendered the decision, was not the author of the measure which he now aids to destroy, he yet, as Secretary of the Treasury, was the strenuous advocate of its passage, without whose powerful cooperation it could not have become a law. Mr. SPAULDING, who was Chairman of the Committee of Ways and Means of the House of Representatives and the author of the bill, expressed to Mr. SEWARD the embarrassment he felt from the want of support on the part of Mr. CHASE, and the latter, after stating in a letter to Mr. SPAULDING, that he came to it reluctantly, declared that he had done so firmly and thoroughly. From an examination of the Congressional reports for February, 1862, it will appear that it was owing to the urgency of Mr. CHASE, in the form of letters, that the bill was suddenly taken from the Committee of Ways and Means and ordered to a vote, after a two-hours discussion. "It is very important," he wrote, "that the bill should go through to-day, and through the Senate this week." The situation of the Treasury required this extraordinary haste. The measure became a law at his solicitation; he put it into immediate execution, and requested, at a later period, that the amount of legal-tender issues should be increased. It was through his direct instrumentality that issues were authorized of denominations under five dollars; it was Mr. CHASE who did more than any other to flood the country with them, ornamented with his own effigy; and now, on a change of scene, he decides that what he then did under the solemnity of his official oath was unconstitutional and void.

The grave circumstance of that extraordinary time can scarcely be forgotten. The State banks on the 31st of December, 1861, had very generally suspended specie payments. At a meeting of their principal managers in New-York, it was announced to Mr. CHASE, on the part of Mr. GALLATIN, that they could take no more of the bonds of the United States; that they were only agents for placing public loans, and that what they had on hand could not be disposed of, as there were no takers, either here or abroad. The attitude of foreign countries at the time was generally not of a friendly character, and the issue presented to our Government was, whether, as the public funds were wholly exhausted and the associated banks had declared their inability to furnish additional funds, we should resort to the policy of a forced circulation or abandon the war. The letters of Mr. CHASE clearly show that we had reached this point in the struggle, and it would appear from his present views that at such a juncture Congress had no other duty but submission. If these views had then prevailed the rebellion would have been successful, probably to the extent of imposing its own authority over the entire Union.

The argument in favor of the constitutionality of the legal-tender act has, as it were, in a nut shell. The power to conduct war carries with it the right to employ all necessary and proper means for achieving success. The policy of Great Britain in making the bills of the Bank of England in effect a legal tender during the wars with NAPOLEON was resorted to from dire necessity. The precious metals were being exported to the continent partly through the instrumentality of emissaries of NAPOLEON, and that proud and opulent nation was compelled to set the example which we followed. It may be assumed that no nation which has permitted an extensive resort to paper money during peace can conduct a war of great magnitude on the basis of the precious metals. Such had been our situation as to preceding issues of paper, and inasmuch as the war power reaches to the height of the emergency, there was no escape from the measure which Mr. CHASE supported. This policy being a means to the end, and Congress, which is the judge of the fact, having pronounced it to be "necessary and proper," it clearly became lawful, because not prohibited by the Constitution.

In bestowing the power to raise and support armies, the means are not expressed, and in raising the means the situation must be regarded. Mr. CHASE, as Secretary of the Treasury, was the best judge at the time; he urged that the legal-tender measure was necessary and proper, and he induced Congress to unite in declaring this fact. The sole question which the Court had to consider, in view of the structure of uniform decisions [illegible] was thrusting this question into the controversy, which, for the end in view, and was unconstitutional. There is no question that it was patriotic, and it is clear, from the experience of England and of this country that, as a rule, it is effectual. What would be the situation if we were obliged to-day to conduct a new war with this decision staring us in the face?

We go to the Senate and find another little cyclone sweeping all common sense before it. Statesmanship is what the people are asking for, but that commodity is at a discount for the moment in the Capitol. Mr. SUMNER is also a combative man, and he has had his hands full of quarrels. He likes a fray, and consequently this must have been one of the happy years of his life, so far as it has gone. When MURAT was receiving about twenty challenges a day, he used to say to the last comer, "Sir, you shall be placed on my list, but I warn you that I can give no preference. You must take your turn." It turn or out of turn, it is all one to Senator SUMNER. He has attacked Mr. TRUMBULL and Mr. STEWART, and threatened to "read" them both out of the party. These gentlemen object to so summary an expulsion, and as reprisals are always easy, they fire off their heavy guns one after the other at the Massachusetts Senator. At last, Mr. DRAKE, a man of peace, solemnly stands up between the combatants and declares that "for the Senate this was a day of degradation before the country." Mr. SUMNER instantly selects out another victim, and turns upon Mr. DRAKE thus, "Do you mean your words to apply to me?" The other lays his hand upon his heart and declares that he does not. So that affair ends without bloodshed.

We need not assure the belligerents that the nation looks with extreme satisfaction on these performances. To be sure there is, as we must mention once more, a great deal of very serious business waiting for some one to do. Our national legislators are of opinion that it can wait. Never mind the question of taxation. Do not even discuss Cuban affairs, the Alabama claims, or any other question of outside interest. It is much more profitable for one gentleman to address another in the language of a negro "minstrel," and for a Senator to make fun of the personal peculiarities of a fellow Senator. All this trifling is more acceptable to members of Congress than hard work. The people look on with a thought in their minds which by-and-by will make itself known and felt. The brawlers of the Capitol will then find that they have been engaged in wars like those which LUCAN has described—nullos habitura triumphos.

Which are We to Believe?

On the 2d of November a Committee of "fifteen traveling preachers" made a report upon some alleged frauds in the Methodist Book Concern. They had spent forty days in the investigation, and had examined many witnesses. They reported, inter alia, "that the investigation of the affairs and business of the bindery has satisfied the Committee that there has been great mismanagement in this department, and that serious losses have occurred therein."

Upon this we stated, not without authority, that of goods purchased last year $19,000 worth were unaccounted for. The son of one of the managers was proved to have received an average commission of ten per cent. on all paper bought by the establishment. This amounted to about $15,000 a year—a dead loss to the Concern.

Now we have another report from a majority of the same Committee. We called the first one a "whitewashing" piece of work. We shall not call the present report anything, but leave the public to make up their minds about it. It simply says that there has been no fraud or corruption in any department of the Book Concern, and that the testimony has even failed "to sustain the allegation of losses." There has been nothing wrong whatever. It is all a mistake. We are told to go away and mind our own business.

By all means. But it really is necessary to ask which report the Managers of the Book Concern wish the public to believe? No. 1 says there have been "serious losses" and "great mismanagement." No. 2 assures us that there has been nothing of the kind. Now, though these reports emanate from the same Committee, they cannot both be right. If the statement of the majority of the Committee now put forward is accurate, how are we to account for the extraordinary blunders made in the first report?

But the majority of the Committee are not to be allowed to close the matter in this way. The minority demand a hearing. Their report we publish this morning, and the facts it communicates render still more extraordinary the conclusions arrived at by the majority. For, though not entirely satisfactory in its details, it is sufficiently explicit to prove that serious losses have occurred, and that the entire system upon which the Concern has been carried on for several years past is radically defective.

Among the reasons given by the minority for dissenting from the majority is this—that "nothing has come before us during our present session to relieve our convictions of losses and mismanagement, as insufficiently expressed in the previous report." On the contrary, the judgment previously pronounced seems to have been greatly strengthened and the culpability of the parties accused made doubly apparent. A sample item contained in the report is that of a broker's profit of $3,808 04 on purchases of $32,039 14 worth of paper made for the Concern, and another instance is given in which as much as thirty per cent. was lost by reason of purchasing through the same medium, instead of dealing directly with the manufacturers. It also appeared that $30,000 worth of leather was paid for by the establishment within two years' time that was never used in its bindery, but was disposed of in an unwarrantable manner. The points we have cited are sufficient to show the character of the revelations which some persons, for reasons best known to themselves, are endeavoring to cover up. Will the [illegible] to such bosh?

Outlay, hardly any, yet appreciable gravity in value, but the Cuban cause evidently gained in dignity. Sumner, Stewart and Chandler are strong men to encounter which has caused a young (ninty) and very tender disease, who cannot be suspected of partiality for filibusterism, adds his voice to theirs in advocacy of recognition. The Committee on Foreign Relations will not be able to hold back its report much longer, and when it reaches the Senate the contest will begin in earnest.

There is arrant demagogism, of course, at the bottom of the Congressional talk in regard to the American citizens imprisoned as Fenian prisoners in British jails. But there is much genuine sympathy, nevertheless, for all the Fenian prisoners, growing out of the harshness with which they are treated by the British officials. They are, as a class, political offenders—O'DONOVAN ROSSA among them; and political offenses ought not to be ranked in their treatment with crimes against property or life. The wrong of the British Government consists in classifying men convicted of sedition—which implies no moral degradation—with convicted thieves and ruffians of every degree. The refusal to discriminate in this respect is a cruelty which calls forth and justifies much feeling in behalf of these prisoners. If British authority is not sufficiently strong to pardon political offenders, at least it should not shock mankind by ranking them with common felons.

Next to newspapers, fiction is still the literature of the people. Even the philosophical community of Boston devours novels in a ratio out of all proportion to other kinds of literature. The public library of the city contains 192,000 volumes, for which an aggregate circulation of 218,071 is returned for last year. Considerably more than half of this, namely 135,718, was confined to 9,139 works of fiction. True to its instincts, however, Boston, according to the learned librarian, reads a large number of novels only to discover "the theologian, the moralist, the historian, the political partisan, the metaphysical thinker, or the traveler in strange lands that lurks beneath." Whether entirely correct or not, it must be confessed that the apology is euphemistically put.

The action of the President in withdrawing the Indian treaties now pending before the Senate seems to be justified by the facts. It appears from Secretary COX's communication that the Great and Little Osages do not want their treaty ratified, because lands are to be taken from them and given to a railroad company; that the Sacs and Foxes object to their treaty, and the Kansas or Kaw Indians—all for the same reason. All these lands, to be relinquished by treaty, are rated far below their real value, and so are those of the Otoes and Missouris, who also wish to withdraw their treaty. It seems, therefore, that these treaties have been mostly made for purposes of land or railroad speculation, and it is creditable to Secretary COX and the Indian Bureau that they have promptly interfered to prevent their ratification.

Telegrams from Paris bear out the view we have already expressed, that the Paris riots have a deeper origin than a mere attempt to effect the rescue of ROCHEFORT. The contemptuous clemency which the Government is said to meditate towards the condemned Deputy will not affect the real cause of the disorders. If the teachings of the ultra-radical journals mean anything at all, they point not only to the overthrow of the existing Government and dynasty, but to an attempt to overthrow the existing fabric of society besides. The establishment of a socialistic Republic is the dream of the journalists who, like FLOURENS, kindle the torch of revolution and then run away. The workmen are significantly reminded that as seldom was swept away by the first revolution, a second is needed to abolish industrial bondage, and to rectify those inequalities of property which the new aristocracy of commerce is interested in maintaining. Socialism has made many sorry exhibitions on this continent and elsewhere, but was never, perhaps, worse employed than in prompting the late insane rising in Paris.

The mania for State division has crossed the Mississippi, and a bill has been introduced into the Missouri Legislature for separating the State into two parts, with the Missouri River as the boundary. So far as heard from, these new projects in political geography are as follows: New-York to be divided into two parts, of which one is to include Manhattan and Long Islands, with such other small fry as Staten Island thrown in, and the other part what remains of the State; New-Jersey to be so divided that the northern part may be "annexed" to New-York; Pennsylvania to be subdivided; Delaware to be pieced out with the fragments of Maryland and Virginia lying west of Chesapeake Bay; West Florida to be set off to Alabama; Tennessee to be bisected; Texas to be trisected; Wisconsin and Michigan each to yield up its northern portions to form the new State of Ontonagon or Superior; Missouri, as we have said, to be broken in twain. All these propositions have been seriously advocated, and some are in train of fulfillment. The mapmakers, at least, will not complain.

Our Panama correspondent sends some interesting items of progress in the Colombian Republics of Central and South America, and one of them leads us to hope that in a short time we may send our telegraphic message to Panama and Lima, and lake Titicaca on the Andes, and have a Peruvian answer back in a few hours—nay, an answer from Valparaiso itself, since Chili will have her cable to Lima. To this end a line is to be laid from Cuba to Colon, on the Isthmus; and, at the same time, the Panama President, CORREOSO, is ready to welcome the telegraph line which is shortly to come northward from Peru. The signal circuit would be still more complete if the wires were to cross the Cordilleras and the pampas to Buenos Ayres. No doubt Don DOMINGO SARMIENTO will look to this.

While the new case of alleged cruelty at sea must not be prejudged, the public will not be satisfied with any half measure of inquiry nor with a light punishment of the accused if he be proved guilty. The helplessness of emigrants at sea against ill-treatment is proverbial, and it has often been questioned whether legislation upon the subject is sufficiently strict and effective. At all events the record of occurrences like that now under discussion is morally significant.

The address of Mr. JACKSON S. SCHULTZ, the new President of the Union League Club, very clearly shows that he does not by any means regard the public duties of that Club as at an end. He admits that "the extraordinary crisis which the organization came into being was not the cause," and that, under the guidance of Administration, national quibbling can be of but little avail in the [illegible]

The mania of speculators may help to "jump our stocks," and gamblers may chuckle over the result, but the sober people of this City, from the rich down to the poor, know as well as they do that all good citizens, of whatever party, will welcome an honest ally in the cause of municipal reform. With the City already substantially under the thumb of Tammany, and with an elaborate machinery now set in operation to perpetuate the rule of a Ring by the mockery of law, honest men of all parties should promptly rally to the rescue.

The value of a ship canal at the Isthmus of Panama would be immense for all the world—as all the world knows; but the great maritime Powers would profit most by it. The British Admiralty is already using that transit, by rail, for the purposes of the royal navy. Several hundred sailors were recently transported from the war-ship Sparrow, on the West side, to the Scorpion, on the Pacific, and so many "homeward-bound" must benefit similarly. The expense was $60,000, but the Admiralty Harcourt and FARQUHAR, considered the "expenditure much cheaper than the way round the Horn," and that were of opinion that seamen will be interchanged in this way for the future, from the Atlantic to the Pacific. They could interchange ships as well if they had a canal, which, if it would be a vast expenditure, would also prove a great saving in the long run.

Hasty legislation about ferry gates is to be deprecated for various reasons. While these safeguards may be desirable in all cases, they may not be always possible. For instance, the Brooklyn people affirm pretty generally that, a system of gates would be a nuisance, adding greatly to the difficulties arising from the immense crowds passing through their ferry houses at particular hours. Where the traffic is only moderate, it is practicable so to regulate it by suitable contrivances, and so to prevent accidents. But even then the utmost care and watchfulness are found essential. If the enlargement of the houses, and of the facilities for getting on and off the boats, were attempted, there would be less rushing and squeezing, and people would be much better able to take care of themselves. The proposed method, at some ferries, would only, it is to be feared, simply create confusion.

The McCauley Memorial—A Case of Justice Delayed.

The memorial for relief presented to Congress by Mrs. FRANCES ANN MCCAULEY, widow of a former United States Consul-General at Alexandria, Egypt, is one that should appeal very strongly to that body, both on grounds of sympathy and justice.

The claim is one for the reimbursement to her of certain extraordinary expenses forced upon her husband during his official services as Consul at Tripoli, and as Consul-General in Egypt. It is an old claim, often pressed and often delayed or denied, and yet as just and binding to-day as when the obligation was contracted—twenty years ago. It is simply a case in which an officer of the Government was compelled, in performing national duties on distant shores, to meet expenses, amounting to several thousand dollars more than his salary. Had not these demands been promptly met from the private resources of Mr. MCCAULEY, the duties in question could not have been discharged. We have said that this claim is not only one of strict justice, but one for generous sympathy. Lieutenant DANIEL S. MCCAULEY was an officer of the United States ship Erie, when R. F. STOCKTON commanded the vessel sixty years and more ago, and when the late revered CHARLES STEWART was commander-in-chief of our naval forces in the Mediterranean. The importance of the consular and judicial services he afterwards rendered us for many years along the African shore of the Mediterranean, in Egypt and Algiers, appeal for the present petition of his widow, independent of its justice. We have not been content to let it go without a word in its behalf.

Twelve years ago the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations took up the claim of Mrs. MCCAULEY, and Mr. FOOT made an elaborate report. From this document it appears that Mr. MCCAULEY was, in 1848, appointed Consul-General of the United States at Alexandria, in Egypt, and so continued till his death in 1859; and that certain peculiar judicial duties were devolved upon him during this time by a Congressional act, passed in 1848, regarding treaty matters pending between the United States and China and the Ottoman Porte. The Secretary of State, on being appealed to, confirmed these facts from his official records. The only question remaining for the Committee to consider, was, whether, under the act of 1848, already spoken of, he was entitled to the compensation asked for. The act in question provided that there should be paid to Consuls "in consideration of the duties herein imposed, the sum of one thousand dollars, in addition to consular fees." It placed the Consuls in Turkey on the same ground as those of China in this respect, and even declared that they "should be responsible not only as diplomatic functionaries and commercial functionaries, but as judicial officers when they perform judicial duties, and shall be held liable for all negligences and misconduct as public officers."

But, when it came to payment, it was discovered that from the peculiar wording of the act there was a possibility of so construing it as to deprive the Consuls in Turkey of the compensation earned for the same duty, under the same act, by the Consuls in China. But the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations declared it to be "evident that the same class of duties and responsibilities are alike devolved upon the diplomatic and consular agents of both countries; and, in the opinion of the Committee, it would seem to be but reasonable to suppose that Congress intended to allow the same measure of compensation to each. To determine otherwise would establish an unjust discrimination between public functionaries performing the same duties and incurring the same responsibilities." The report, therefore, closed by declaring that "the Committee are of opinion that the claimant is entitled to the relief asked for, and report a bill accordingly." In this case what is called "relief" is simply the payment of a debt due by the United States Government, for moneys expended in its service, and amounting to many thousands of dollars.

Such, in fine, is a brief summary of the documentary evidence on which the present petition rests, and of the facts which will enlighten opinion as to its merits. We may express the hope that justice, though long delayed, will now be quickly and amply rendered.

Sale of the Thompson Paintings—Fifth Day.

At the morning session of yesterday pictures numbered from 951 to 1,000, inclusive, were sold, reaching $6,020 50, and making the total amount received to the close of the morning sale $63,933 50. The first painting of note disposed of was No. 1,006. A New-England scene entitled "Driving Home," by Bierstadt, which was purchased by Mr. Townsend Connelly, of this City, for $825. No. 1,008, by the same artist, a marine view at evening was struck off to Mr. T. B. Pickle, of Newark, N. J., for $310. No. 1,007, "Landscape and Cattle," by Willis, was bought by Mr. Lawson Valentine for $305. The following pictures were also purchased by Mr. Valentine at the annexed prices: No. 1,045, "Bacchus and Ariadne," by Rosset, $115 00; No. 1,047, a landscape by Zuccharelli, $47 50; No. 1,051, "Nymphs Bathing," by Boucher, $70; No. 1,053, a landscape attributed to Wilson, $[illegible]; and No. 1,074, "View of the Bay and City of New-York," by Havell, $[illegible]. Besides a number of lower-priced pictures. No. 1,020, a landscape with cattle, by Boudet, $[illegible], was purchased by Mrs. Bates, of this City, for $[illegible], as was also No. 1,021. No. 1,028, "Females on Rocks by the Sea-shore," by Fournier, was sold to Mr. Lewis, of Hoboken, for $[illegible]. Edwin Forrest, the actor, bought No. 1,029, "Portrait of Nell Gwynne."

ALBANY.

Judge Potter to be Reinstated—The Sectarian School Law—A Flood of Petitions—Brooklyn Politics—Senator Hall Moves Nominations by the Governor.

From Our Own Correspondent.

ALBANY, FRIDAY, Feb. 11, 1870.

The Assembly this morning disgraced of the Bench its dignity, perpetrated in the arrest of H. Ray, by resolving to summon Judge Potter, District-Attorney French and Officer Burnham before the bar of the House on Wednesday next to explain or apologize for their conduct and receive such punishment or reprimand as the House may direct. The remainder of the session was spent in the third reading of bills.

THE SECTARIAN SCHOOL FUND.

Petitions are flowing in from all parts of the State asking for the repeal of the law that was smuggled into the New-York City Tax Levy last Winter appropriating a sum equal to twenty per cent of the Metropolitan Excise Fund of 1869 (about $300,000) for the support of sectarian schools in that City. As the entering wedge to the destruction of our common school system, this law, which was mainly in the interest of the Catholics—the open enemies of this system—has excited a good deal of feeling throughout the State. Mr. WHITE, the Republican member from New-York, some days ago introduced a bill to repeal the law, which was referred by the Speaker to the Committee of Ways and Means. Mr. JACOBS, the Chairman of the Committee, after keeping it for a week or more, has finally shirked the responsibility of reporting or rejecting it by moving its reference to the Committee on Public Education, on pretense that it was not a proper subject for the consideration of the Ways and Means Committee. The Democracy are very sensitive about showing their hand on this school question, but they have got to meet it and put themselves on record, and they may as well do it on the bill as any other. Some members, I am informed, have refused to present petitions for the repeal of the law, sent them by the people of their districts. Mr. WHITE's bill is now in the hands of the Committee on Public Education, which is composed of the following members: John L. Flagg, of Troy, Chairman; Lawrence D. Kiernan, of New-York; Silas Sweet, North Blenheim; James B. Pearsall, Glen Cove; Jay A. Pease, West Leyden; Daniel D. Barnes, Canaan Four Corners; Edward C. Walker, Batavia; J. Thomas Davis, East Greenbush; Samuel S. Lowery, Utica. The first six are Democrats, and the last three Republicans. The petitions for the repeal of the law presented by Senators, of which there have been a score or more, are all referred to the Committee on Charitable and Religious Societies, of which Wm. M. Tweed, the author of the law, is Chairman.

BROOKLYN MATTERS.

The precincts of the Brooklyn City Hall must be deserted about these days. A quorum of the Board of Aldermen and a majority of the political hangers-on of that town have been hovering about the Legislature for the last two days for the purpose, as alleged, of aiding, with their combined wisdom, the Committee appointed to draft a new charter for that city. The Committee consists of JACOBS, CULLEN and Senator MURPHY, and it is said they have concluded, after holding half a dozen conferences, to recommend divers amendments to the present Charter, the leading points of which are to place the appointments of the heads of the different Commissions in the hands of the Mayor and Common Council, who are also to have control of the disbursements, and to elect the Board of Education on a general ticket after the manner of the New-York Board of Supervisors, so as to secure to the minority a representation of five out of the twelve members. On this last point, however, there is a disagreement among the Committee. As to the Police, they want to be independent of New-York, but can do nothing until the Tammany men settle their quarrels and come to some agreement about abolishing the Metropolitan Police and other Commissions. Senator PIERCE to-day introduced a bill to reorganize the Brooklyn Board of Education on the plan above alluded to, but he took occasion to say that he did not wish to be considered as committed in its favor. The bill provides that the members of the new Board shall hold office for three years.

NO MORE NOMINATIONS.

The Senate has held no Executive Session this week, and no nominations of any kind have been sent in by the Governor. The quarrel between His Excellency and the Senate over the McConihe confirmation remains in statu quo, with no indications of a back down on either side. S.

THE STATE LEGISLATURE

SENATE....ALBANY, Friday, Feb. 11.

REPORTS.

By Mr. TWEED—Amending the act chartering the New-York Institute for the Blind.

By Mr. CAULDWELL—The Yonkers Street bill.

By Mr. WOODS—Authorizing the North American Life Insurance Company to issue scrip to policy holders.

Mr. CHAPMAN presented the report of the Board of Trustees of the New-York State Inebriate Asylum.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

By Mr. PIERCE—Relative to the Brooklyn public schools; also, to improve Fourth-street, Brooklyn.

BILLS PASSED.

Allowing the Hackensack and New-York Railroad Company to extend their track to the Hudson River.

Chartering the Carpenters' and Joiners' Association of New-York.

Adjourned until Monday evening.

A Murdered Baby Found in Greenwich—The Body in a Pine Box, Buried on the South Morris Farm.

For months past Brooklyn has been blest with numerous foundlings, the offspring of inhuman parents, who have been cared for as provided by law—and the parents, but the babies. This part of the baby business not proving sufficiently sensational for some barbarous taste, it has developed a new and severer style, as the story about to be related will show. At an early hour yesterday morning, while Roundsman JOHNSON, of the Forty-eighth Precinct, was passing over the far-scattered posts of Gowanus, he came upon the marks of a grave, fresh and the footprints of men in the snow, in the neighborhood of Thirty-eighth-street and Fourth-avenue, well down the road towards Bayside. Upon following up the fresh tracks he discovered a newly-made mound in a patch of land known as part of the Jacob Morris farm, long since used as a burying ground, but in which no interments had taken place since the Year Ten. Suspecting that there was something wrong, he reported his discovery at the Station House, and Yesterday two men were sent with picks and shovels to the place, and with some difficulty dug down through the frozen earth was then dug up entire a pine box, about three feet long and wide. The box was brought to the station-house and unscrewed, was found to contain the body of an infant, apparently not more than four days old. The head had been nearly torn from the body, and other traces of violence were present. The Coroner was of opinion that the child had been a healthy one and unusually large, and he doubt existed as to the fact that the child had been the victim of foul play. The box and its contents were conveyed to the Morgue, where Dr. SHEPARD will make a post mortem examination of the body, and Coroner JONES will hold an inquest today.

AMUSEMENTS.

"IL BALLO IN MASCHERA" AT THE ACADEMY.

A performance of "Il Ballo" last night calls for notice only in the particulars wherein it differed from late representations of the opera at the same house. Signor LEVRASSO, Mme. BRIGNOLI and Mlle. LAMI sang, respectively, Riccardo, Amelia and Oscar as before—or even better in parts—and as before greatly to public satisfaction. Poor Miss. CHILSON, whose loss we were called off some time ago to lament, was replaced on the present occasion by Miss. ELIZA LUMLEY, who gave a rather hard, but sufficiently accurate and trusty interpretation of the unpromising character of Ulrica. The concerted pieces were well and trippingly sung, and although Signor LEVRASSO was not in his best voice, and failed in the barcarolle and other choice bits of the second act to evoke the enthusiasm he easily excited in December, he came up, as he usually does, magnificently at the close. Mme. BRIGNOLI, on the other hand, was in the best condition and surpassed, as the heroine, her former efforts; and Mlle. LAMI scored a tumultuous success for her first song, and kept up to the mark very nicely throughout. Encore was sung by Dr. VALENTINE, announced as "the American Amateur," and as making on the occasion his first appearance in public. It would be mistaken kindness to say that Dr. VALENTINE proved himself in all respects to be equal to the demands of this very exacting role. He has a pleasant baritone voice—which, for lyrical purposes, and in so large a theatre, at least, he has yet to learn how to use—an agreeable person and face, and a total ignorance of the exigencies of the stage. Dr. VALENTINE was ill-advised in attempting for his primary essay so dramatic and trying a part as Renato. Something lighter and less responsible would have been a far more judicious selection. We do not mean to imply that he may not hereafter become a great operatic artist. The noble powers of Mr. SAULLET, the English-Italian baritone, were but imperfectly indicated in his earlier performances, and a similar experience may be undergone by Dr. VALENTINE. For his sake we trust it may; but neither for his sake nor for that of his audience can we encourage him without further practice in smaller houses and easier parts to challenge criticism in the characters of the leading baritone range.

"Fra Diavolo" is announced for the matinee to-day, with Miss KELLOGG as Zerlina, and "Rigoletto" will positively, as we are assured, be sung on Monday.

Miscellaneous.

TO-NIGHT'S ANNOUNCEMENTS.

A concert in aid of a destitute family is to be given at the Hall of the Young Men's Christian Association this evening. Miss ANNA MEHLIG, pianist; Mr. N. HAGEN, viola player; Mr. C. WERNER, violoncellist, and Messrs. SCHLESINGER and ANDRESEN, violinists, will supply the music, while a brief address is promised by Mr. R. J. DE CORDOVA.....The first hearing of Mr. MOLLENHAUER's symphony, "The Passions," will be afforded the audience at Steinway Hall this evening. The poem is to be recited, for this occasion only, by Mr. EDWIN BOOTH....."Dalila" will be acted at the French Theatre by Mme. MOREAU and M. WERTHEIMBER's dramatic troupe.

PILGRIM ORGAN CONCERTS.

Dr. P. H. VAN DER WEYDE, organist, and Mr. HENRY CROPTS, tenor, and Miss JOSIE EDDY, soprano, will take part in to-day's concert.

HARVARD ALUMNI DINNER.

A Pleasant Time Among the Resident Graduates—Addresses by President Eliot, Hon. Wm. M. Evarts, Joseph H. Choate and Others.

The Harvard Club of New-York City, composed of alumni of the Harvard University residing here and in the vicinity, gave its fourth annual dinner at DELMONICO's last evening. J. C. CARTER, Esq., President of the Club, presided. There were present at the guests' table President ELIOT, of the University; Hon. WM. M. EVARTS, Professor E. W. GURNEY, Rev. O. B. FROTHINGHAM; Professor C. C. LANGDELL, of the Dane Law School; G. P. PUTNAM and E. L. GODKIN, Esqs. After justice was done to the good things of the feast, President CARTER opened the intellectual exercises by a neat address, in which he commended the University for its past, and augured well for its future career, playfully alluded to incidents pertaining to University life; announced the fact that, since his departure from the classic shades of Cambridge, he had, like the Roman of old, "hung up his arms in the temple, and retired to the arid and desolate wastes of the world," and announced, as the first toast, "Our Alma Mater." To this toast President ELIOT responded, setting forth the changes which had been lately made in the curriculum of the University, and complimenting the alumni for having so well maintained the reputation of their educational mother in their various professional pursuits. He spoke also of the need, at this day, of teachers who were born such—teachers by the grace of God as well as by election. He considered the Universities of the country the best bond of union, from the fact that the most precious teaching now taught by them was the inculcation of public spiritedness. In conclusion, he was proud to say of Harvard that the good and brave deeds of her sons had ennobled the mother; and he assured the alumni that the University would never forget that, to be worthy of her proud name, she must ever strive that path.

An ode composed for the occasion by HORATIO ALGER, an alumnus, was here sung in chorus with fine effect.

To the second toast, "The Faculty of Harvard College," Professor E. W. GURNEY responded briefly, paying a high compliment to the alumni, and expressing his hope that in the future the ranks of the Faculty would be supplied from their ranks.

The third toast, "Our Sister Colleges," was responded to by Hon. WM. M. EVARTS, whose address was replete with playful allusions as well as a beauty of language sui generis, to which justice cannot be done in a mere summary paragraph. He closed by proposing "The ancient and great renown of Harvard University, shared and yet amplified by all the other colleges in the land," which sentiment was loudly applauded.

The other toasts were "The Reverend Clergy," responded to by Rev. O. B. FROTHINGHAM; "The Legal and Medical Professions," by JOS. H. CHOATE; "The Press," by E. L. GODKIN, editor of the Nation; and "The Dane Law School," by Professor C. C. LANGDELL, lately elected to assume the charge of that department of the University. Several volunteer toasts were offered and responses made, it being after midnight before the gathering broke up.

It may be interesting to know that the seal of the Harvard Club is the same as was used when the University was founded, differing only in the slight modifications adopted by the Faculty of the institution.

Sale of Paintings at Clinton Hall.

A sale of a small but choice collection of oil paintings, all by native artists, with three or four exceptions, took place last evening at the art gallery of LEAVITT, STRANGE & Co., in Clinton Hall. The attendance was large and comprised a number of our wealthiest citizens. Mr. J. F. KENSETT was represented by five pictures, which sold as follows: "In the Meadows," $175; "Genesee River," $165; "Lake Scene," $115; "Lily Pond," $85; "Roman Aqueduct," $200. Mr. A. B. Gifford's seven pictures brought the following prices: "Piedras Hill-Rome," $115; "Mount Desert," $220; "Home in the Wilderness," $200; "The Adirondacks," $115; "Cape Ann," $120; "Long Branch," $65; "Mouth of Hackensack River with Gathering Storm," (the finest picture in the collection,) $225. Mr. Loop's "Roman Maiden" brought $115; Mr. Scheuer's "Blackwater," one Mr. J. Smith's "Sunrise," $95; Mr. Zisse's "Constantinople," $70; Mehlig's "Lake Scene," $105; Tryon's "Lambscene with Cattle," $115; Robbe's "Landscape," $120; Lambdin's View in France," $125; Durand's "Old Man of the Mountain," $85; Gaul's "Hiram," $60; Dix's "Wood Scene," $120; Schoen's "Armour," (small water colors) $60. Mr. Whittredge had two small scenes in the collection, which half a dozen sold on the spot yesterday. Mr. R. Johnson's "Why Don't It Come," (girl churning,) after a brisk competition, was sold for $200.

FORTY-FIRST CONGRESS.

SECOND SESSION.

SENATE....WASHINGTON, Friday, Feb. 11.

Mr. CONKLING introduced a bill granting lands to aid in the construction of a canal in Geneva.

BILLS REPORTED FROM COMMITTEE.

Mr. PRESCOTT, from the Committee on Public Lands, reported, without amendment, a bill providing for the location of Agricultural College scrip by actual settlers; also, with amendments, a bill providing for the sale of certain lands on San Ildefonso, in Bexar County, S. C.

Mr. HOWARD, from the Committee on the Pacific Railroad, reported, with amendment, the bill relating to the Central Branch Union Pacific Railroad.

Mr. WILLIAMS, from the Committee on Public Lands, reported, with an amendment, the bill granting land to aid in the construction of a railroad from the Columbia River to Puget Sound.

Mr. MORRILL, of Vermont, from the Committee on Public Grounds, reported a bill to enlarge the public grounds surrounding the Capitol. Passed.

RECOGNITION OF THE CUBANS AS BELLIGERENTS.

Mr. SHERMAN introduced the following preamble and resolution:

WHEREAS, The United States concurred with many leading nations of the world in the recognition of the belligerent status of insurgents in their efforts to secure independence from European dominion; and

WHEREAS, The Spanish Provinces in the West Indies, adjacent to Cuba, are at this time in the actual possession of the United States, and the United States will observe strict neutrality between the belligerent parties, as in their duty under the law of nations.

Mr. SHERMAN said he desired to call the attention of the Committee on Foreign Relations to the fact that the Cuban question is a matter of great much larger interest than the cold indifference of the Government towards Cuban affairs. It was but natural that a struggle like that now progressing so near our own border should touch the national heart. He trusted the Committee on Foreign Relations would take some action with a view to securing fair play on our own part between Cuba and Spain. His resolution did not propose to recognize Cuban independence, but simply a condition of actual warfare with a view to fair play hereafter.

Mr. POMEROY suggested that the resolution should include a declaration that the Cubans were not only fighting for independence, which was due, but for freedom also.

Mr. SUMNER said the Committee on Foreign Relations had somewhat considered the subject, but that the facts before them, as to the actual condition of Cuban affairs, were not sufficient to warrant definite action.

Mr. SHERMAN remarked that the fact that Spain had built thirty gunboats in our ports to put down what it was said to be a little rebellion, was a sufficient warrant for his resolution.

A question of order by Mr. DAVIS, that in its present stage the resolution was not debatable, being affirmed by the Chair, the resolution was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

ABOLITION OF THE FRANKING PRIVILEGE.

On motion of Mr. RAMSEY, the bill to abolish the franking privilege was then taken up.

Mr. DRAKE renewed his amendment to continue the existing privileges of the law in favor of publishers of newspapers and periodicals. He said the attempt was made by the present bill to repeal the provisions of the law extending to the poor man much-needed facilities for general information afforded by cheap newspapers. He believed that some amendment in the matter of newspaper circulation was absolutely demanded. The bill aimed to repeal wholesome laws without sufficient pretext, and he thought it had been made so odious to people in order to secure its rejection by the Senate. If, under the bill in its present shape a man living in the Rocky Mountains could have a New-York daily sent to him for the same cost he would pay for a newspaper published in the county in which he lived. This would operate to benefit great dailies while breaking down the country press. The sine qua non of the true policy was to encourage the circulation of the local Press.

Mr. SHERMAN renewed his amendment to allow free circulation of country papers. He preferred this proposition to that submitted by Mr. DRAKE, believing the large newspapers could afford to pay postage upon their exchanges, while the county newspapers ought to have free circulation within the county limits in order to compete with the large dailies.

Mr. CONKLING said the bill would not take effect until July 1, and he favored its immediate passage saving the amendment in a separate form of such additional legislation on the subject as might be necessary. He said he admitted the injustice of burdening a small county paper with the same postage for which a daily issue traveled from one end of the continent to the other.

Mr. MORTON declared himself in favor of abolishing the franking privilege for the reason, among others, of personal convenience, as the so-called privilege had been to members of Congress a great annoyance. He did not think the Government would save one dollar by the proposed reform, but preferred that the present measure should be properly amended so that it came ground would not be gone over hereafter. He said the bill, as it came from the House, was regarded by country newspapers as a measure of revenge on the part of Congress, because they had urged the abolition of the franking privilege. He would not say there was any ground for this, but such was the impression.

MISSISSIPPI.

At this point the morning hour expired, and the bill was laid aside to be taken up with the unfinished business, which was the Mississippi bill.

Mr. HAMLIN, with a view to take up the District of Columbia business, moved to postpone the bill until to-morrow (Saturday) at 1 o'clock; which was not agreed to, upon division, by a vote of 22 to 23. The consideration of the Mississippi bill was then proceeded with.

Mr. VICKERS delivered a lengthy written argument upon the relations of the States, the necessity of confining the departments of the Government within their legitimate spheres, and in arrangement of the reconstruction policy.

Mr. WILLEY said he voted against the imposition of conditions in the case of Virginia, not because he did not approve of the purposes sought to be accomplished, but because he doubted, not only their constitutionality, but their utility. Having voted for the bill admitting the State which contained these conditions, he would favor their imposition in the present case.

Mr. DAVIS expressed the hope that those Senators who believed the proposed conditions to be unconstitutional, would, in view of their oath of office to support the Constitution, vote against them, no matter what might have been their previous action.

Mr. TRUMBULL opposed the conditions, but if they were enforced he would not oppose the bill. He believed they would prove futile and abortive, a State having a perfect right to disregard them because Congress had no legitimate authority to legislate as proposed.

Mr. DRAKE called attention to the fact that the Senators who had voted for it to attack the Senator from Massachusetts, were those who, upon the reconstruction measures had taken sides with the Democrats. He would ask what was the meaning of the coming together in the Senate of the hitherto opposing and discordant elements in opposition to the policy which the Republican majorities in both Houses had hitherto sustained? If conservative Republicanism was to develop itself in the Senate as opposed to Radical Republicanism, he desired the fact to be stated, so that it might be known at once. There was a billing and cooing in the votes here, a dovetailing in the yeas and nays, between the Republican Senators and the Democratic Senators. He would like to understand what was going on. Perhaps he did not understand it because his head was dull, or perhaps it was that there was something in this stage of the game that was not to be developed to the perceptions of the Senate and the country.

Mr. DOOLITTLE said, however much he desired the adoption of a conservative policy, he feared the apprehension expressed by Mr. DRAKE would not be realized. He believed the accusations against the Judiciary Committee were idle, and proceeded to argue upon the general subject.

Upon the conclusion of his remarks Mr. NYE inquired on which side of the question the Senator had spoken. When that Senator first came to the Senate he could not get muskrats enough to slaughter the rebels with, but he had subsequently changed his position.

Mr. POWLER said he was glad that the Senator from Nevada (Mr. NYE) had occupied the position which he (Mr. POWLER) held during the most trying periods of the war, his votes might not now be so loud nor the consistency so well established. Had he (Mr. POWLER) in former times helped the slave drivers of the South to hound upon their slaves he would manifest a tenderer feeling than had been shown by the Senator from Nevada. He claimed that if the boasted friends of freedom in the Legislatures of Massachusetts, New-York and Missouri had been as faithful to the cause as the Senator claimed to have been, the slave drivers would not have cracked his whip near us long as he did. It was the laddies of those who pretended to have been the earliest opponents of slavery that enabled the slave driver's authority to continue.

Mr. NYE remarked that the difference between himself and the Senator from Tennessee was that his own were follies of youth, while those of the Senator were follies of age.

The colloquy between Messrs. POWLER and NYE was finally terminated by the Chair, who remarked that the expression "He returned to his wallow," which was used by Mr. NYE, was not in order.

Mr. TRUMBULL said the necessity of proposed conditions was assumed to be that they were essential to the establishment of a republican form of Government in a State. If the condition the voters should need was not privileges to make Mississippi a republican State, Massachusetts was allowed a place in the Union without the same provision being required of her people; so with all the provisions. When did it become necessary that to be republican the people of a State should provide a school fund and school privileges? He proceeded to show that these requirements were unknown to the Constitution or the time of its formation.

Mr. HOWARD made some remarks in favor of imposing the conditions.

DEATH OF ANOTHER REPRESENTATIVE.

At six o'clock a message was received from the House of Representatives announcing the death of Representative S. F. HOOPER, of Wisconsin, when a message was sent to the House of Representatives that the Senate, having heard with sorrow of the death of Hon. SAMUEL F. HOOPER, a member of the House from Wisconsin, and a member of the Senate from the same State, would, as a mark of respect to the memory of the deceased, adjourn until Monday.

BILLS REPORTED FROM COMMITTEE.

Mr. PRESCOTT, from the Committee on Public Lands, reported, without amendment, a bill providing for the location of Agricultural College scrip by actual settlers; also, with amendments, a bill providing for the sale of certain lands on San Ildefonso, in Bexar County, S. C.

Mr. HOWARD, from the Committee on the Pacific Railroad, reported, with amendment, the bill relating to the Central Branch Union Pacific Railroad.

Mr. WILLIAMS, from the Committee on Public Lands, reported, with an amendment, the bill granting land to aid in the construction of a railroad from the Columbia River to Puget Sound.

Mr. MORRILL, of Vermont, from the Committee on Public Grounds, reported a bill to enlarge the public grounds surrounding the Capitol. Passed.

RECOGNITION OF THE CUBANS AS BELLIGERENTS.

Mr. SHERMAN introduced the following preamble and resolution:

WHEREAS, The United States concurred with many leading nations of the world in the recognition of the belligerent status of insurgents in their efforts to secure independence from European dominion; and

WHEREAS, The Spanish Provinces in the West Indies, adjacent to Cuba, are at this time in the actual possession of the United States, and the United States will observe strict neutrality between the belligerent parties, as in their duty under the law of nations.

Mr. SHERMAN said he desired to call the attention of the Committee on Foreign Relations to the fact that the Cuban question is a matter of great much larger interest than the cold indifference of the Government towards Cuban affairs. It was but natural that a struggle like that now progressing so near our own border should touch the national heart. He trusted the Committee on Foreign Relations would take some action with a view to securing fair play on our own part between Cuba and Spain. His resolution did not propose to recognize Cuban independence, but simply a condition of actual warfare with a view to fair play hereafter.

Mr. POMEROY suggested that the resolution should include a declaration that the Cubans were not only fighting for independence, which was due, but for freedom also.

Mr. SUMNER said the Committee on Foreign Relations had somewhat considered the subject, but that the facts before them, as to the actual condition of Cuban affairs, were not sufficient to warrant definite action.

Mr. SHERMAN remarked that the fact that Spain had built thirty gunboats in our ports to put down, what it was said to be, a little rebellion, was a sufficient warrant for his resolution.

A question of order by Mr. DAVIS, that in its present stage the resolution was not debatable, being affirmed by the Chair, the resolution was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

ABOLITION OF THE FRANKING PRIVILEGE.

On motion of Mr. RAMSEY, the bill to abolish the franking privilege was then taken up.

Mr. DRAKE renewed his amendment to continue the existing privileges of the law in favor of publishers of newspapers and periodicals. He said the attempt was made by the present bill to repeal the provisions of the law extending to the poor man much-needed facilities for general information afforded by cheap newspapers. He believed that some amendment in the matter of newspaper circulation was absolutely demanded. The bill aimed to repeal wholesome laws without sufficient pretext, and he thought it had been made so odious to people in order to secure its rejection by the Senate. If, under the bill in its present shape a man living in the Rocky Mountains could have a New-York daily sent to him for the same cost he would pay for a newspaper published in the county in which he lived. This would operate to benefit great dailies while breaking down the country press. The sine qua non of the true policy was to encourage the circulation of the local Press.

Mr. SHERMAN renewed his amendment to allow free circulation of country papers. He preferred this proposition to that submitted by Mr. DRAKE, believing the large newspapers could afford to pay postage upon their exchanges, while the county newspapers ought to have free circulation within the county limits in order to compete with the large dailies.

Mr. CONKLING said the bill would not take effect until July 1, and he favored its immediate passage saving the amendment in a separate form of such additional legislation on the subject as might be necessary. He said he admitted the injustice of burdening a small county paper with the same postage for which a daily issue traveled from one end of the continent to the other.

Mr. MORTON declared himself in favor of abolishing the franking privilege for the reason, among others, of personal convenience, as the so-called privilege had been to members of Congress a great annoyance. He did not think the Government would save one dollar by the proposed reform, but preferred that the present measure should be properly amended so that it came ground would not be gone over hereafter. He said the bill, as it came from the House, was regarded by country newspapers as a measure of revenge on the part of Congress, because they had urged the abolition of the franking privilege. He would not say there was any ground for this, but such was the impression.

MISSISSIPPI.

At this point the morning hour expired, and the bill was laid aside to be taken up with the unfinished business, which was the Mississippi bill.

Mr. HAMLIN, with a view to take up the District of Columbia business, moved to postpone the bill until to-morrow (Saturday) at 1 o'clock; which was not agreed to, upon division, by a vote of 22 to 23. The consideration of the Mississippi bill was then proceeded with.

Mr. VICKERS delivered a lengthy written argument upon the relations of the States, the necessity of confining the departments of the Government within their legitimate spheres, and in arrangement of the reconstruction policy.

Mr. WILLEY said he voted against the imposition of conditions in the case of Virginia, not because he did not approve of the purposes sought to be accomplished, but because he doubted, not only their constitutionality, but their utility. Having voted for the bill admitting the State which contained these conditions, he would favor their imposition in the present case.

Mr. DAVIS expressed the hope that those Senators who believed the proposed conditions to be unconstitutional, would, in view of their oath of office to support the Constitution, vote against them, no matter what might have been their previous action.

THE SHIP NEPTUNE.

The Alleged Cruelties on the Vessel—A statement of Captain E. W. Peabody.

Captain Enoch W. Peabody, of the ship Neptune, concerning whose alleged maltreatment of certain members of his crew so much has lately been said in the newspapers, desires the public to suspend judgment regarding the allegations made against him, until the result of the legal investigation now pending shall be made known. His version of the affair is totally different from the one which has been given to the public. Captain Peabody says that the principal complainant against him, John Brady, came on board his ship as a seaman in Liverpool Harbor Dec. 24, 1869. One Jacob Miller, another seaman, was in company with him. When the small boat in which they were, came alongside the Neptune, Captain Peabody threw them a line with which to make fast, when Brady, after swearing at to the last, cutting him with a knife, "Now, you d—d—, haul away!" This was the first word that the complainant ever addressed to him. When the two men came on board, Captain Peabody suggested to Brady that he (Brady) be more careful in the use of language. After the men had gone forward, the pilot, who was to conduct the ship seaward, gave orders that more chain cable should be paid out, the vessel being still at anchor. The second mate then had charge of the deck. Brady would not, at first, do his work as directed, and the second mate was advancing towards him to make him take hold, when he drew a sheath-knife and made a lunge at him with it. Brady missed his aim, however, and struck some of the wood work in the vicinity, heading his knife. Shortly afterwards the Captain entered the mess room to come off to land in the yawl. Brady came with them, and, while on his way, the knife was taken from him by the second mate. Brady says that the Captain, being in the cabin, heard a disturbance on deck. Coming up to ascertain what caused it, he found the second mate and Brady fighting, and during the melée Brady got his nose scratched. On inquiry, Captain Peabody discovered that Brady had said to the second mate "Take a stroke of work on board the Bloody Ship," and that the disturbance arose from the action of the second mate, who heard the avowal, but make him work. So far as work was concerned there was no more trouble with Brady during the voyage. There were five "bankers" as they are called, or forecastle bullies, among the crew, who had made the green hands not only their slaves but their property, but the crew knew of this. Of these Brady was one. Having discovered this state of affairs, the Captain provided berths for the green hands (four in number) in the steerage, taking them out of the forecastle altogether. By a system of espionage well known to sea Captains, he learned that the bankers had been quartered in the same boarding house with the men who are complainants against the Captain, and doubtless have been threatened with punishment unless they corroborate what ever story the leaders in this prosecution choose to trump up against the Captain and his officers. Captain Peabody denies the material statements of Brady and his colleagues to the effect that he (Captain Peabody) ever knocked down him (or them, or any of them) with a belaying pin, either of wood or of iron; he never heard of a belaying pin being thus used aboard his ship. He denies also, that the mates as to forcing Brady, or any other of the crew, to stand on their heads; also all the statements relative to the men being kicked by him; also as to his having used a heated cane or brass knuckles on any of them; he has not, nor did he ever have, either of these articles on board his ship. These complaints he says, all arise from the starboard watch. The port watch not only are perfectly satisfied with their treatment, but most of them express a desire to ship in the Neptune for another voyage. Offers have already been made to him, he says, through the counsel of the complainants, to compromise the matter on the payment of $500; but as the Captain considers the whole affair a blackmailing arrangement, he refuses to be bled. He says he is anxious to have the legal investigation proceeded with immediately, feeling confident that the result will prove his entire innocence of the charges laid to his charge.

The Alleged Gangers' Frauds.

The examination in the case of E. W. Farrington, an ex-United States gauger, jointly arrested with Lewis P. Wetmore, on a charge of making false returns on a large quantity of whisky, was commenced in the United States Commissioners' Office yesterday. Deputy Collector Ferd. J. A. Koop was introduced as a witness for the Government for the purpose of showing that he had found a return of fifty barrels of whisky, dated Sept. 2, 1869, purporting to be signed by the defendant; and that attached to the return was an inventory which gave the contents as 42,741 wine gallons. Revenue officers testified that the return was one of the kind which the Government intended to prove as fraudulent. Andrew Clark furnished some evidence, after which the case was adjourned until the 15th inst., in consequence of the inability of the Government to prove that the signature to the alleged false returns was in the handwriting of the accused. Testimony for that purpose is expected to be forthcoming at the next examination.

The Myers Perjury Case Settled.

Yesterday morning the litigation so long pending between John Myers, Sr., and George T. Chambers, of Astoria, was brought to a final conclusion, all parties consenting to withdraw their suits. Myers had brought five civil suits against Mr. Chambers to recover $65,000 for the loss of his son. On the other hand Chambers had Myers arrested for perjury, and on the preliminary examination he was held to await the action of the Grand Jury. The District-Attorney being willing that the case should drop, the parties agreed to it, Myers paying the costs.

The Hill Defalcation.

Additional evidence was taken yesterday before United States Commissioner Shields in the case of Morris S. Hill, charged with embezzling $20,000 from the Farmers' and Drovers' Bank of Somers, Westchester County, by means of false entries. Samuel Stevens testified that he gave the defendant $100 to deposit in the bank on the 8th of October, 1869, but that he had never heard of the money since that time. Testimony relative to entries in the journal of the bank were given by E. C. Gregory and Isaac H. Purdy, after which the case was adjourned.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

NEW-YORK.

For some time past, PATRICK O'HEARN, a native of Ireland, 70 years of age, kept a small liquor store at No. 41 Abington-place, in Thirty-ninth-street, near North River. Since Wednesday night his saloon has been closed, but the circumstance caused no anxiety, and it was only by accident that a friend during his way in yesterday afternoon, found the old man lying under his counter dead. From the appearance of the body it was suspected that he had died from natural causes, and it was certain that he had been dead for some hours. The Coroner was notified, and an inquest will be held this morning.

It was reported at the Central Police office yesterday that while patrolling his post Officer WYATT, of the Mercantile Precinct, picked up a carpet bag in which he found the remains of a fully grown infant. There was nothing to indicate whose baby it was, and it was sent to the Morgue for an investigation by the Coroner.

Post Sedgwick, No. 11, of the Grand Army of the Republic, met at the Lodge-room, over Wallack's Theatre, under very pleasant circumstances, last evening, the occasion being the presentation of resolutions to the lodge by Colonel R. B. Lawson on behalf of the National Encampment. General JOHN COCHRANE responded to the latter's address, after which an address on the objects of the G. A. R. was made by Colonel A. J. H. DUGANNE. The exercises were also enlivened by the Sedgwick Glee Club, and Messrs. Geo. G. FOSTER and G. W. LEOP. Colonel JOSEPH FORBES is Commander of the Lodge.

The charge recently made against JOHN H. BERTRAM, of No. 163 Duane-street, of having sold several grams of matches seized at his premises after they had been placed in the hands of Government officers for condemnation, was dismissed yesterday. JOHN LOHIS, of No. 471 West Fifty-fourth-street, who is charged with having taken part in the alleged affray, was held for further examination.

The annual ball of National Lodge, No. [illegible], Independent Order of Odd-Fellows, took place at Apollo Hall, corner of Broadway and Twenty-eighth-street, last evening. The festivities were well attended, and were greatly enjoyed by those present.

Last evening, Mr. WM. ANDERSON, of the Herald, repeated his popular and instructive lecture on "Marriage," in aid of the Methodist Church at New-Brighton, S. I. The attendance was very large, and a handsome sum must have been realized for this worthy object.

Mrs. LAURA C. HOLLOWAY delivered an exceedingly interesting lecture on "Charlotte Bronte," in the large hall of the Cooper Institute, last evening. Mrs. Holloway was introduced by Mr. Fessue, Treasurer of the Cuban Junta, and described the parents of "Currer Bell" and her early days. She portrayed her trials and troubles, and the circumstances attendant on the publication of "Jane Eyre." She was an enthusiastic admirer of the subject of her lecture, and the many graceful passages were warmly applauded by those present. Her description of CHARLOTTE BRONTE'S character and principles, and her commendation of her thorough yet earnest womanhood, met the hearty sympathy of all present. Mrs. HOLLOWAY is a lady of very prepossessing appearance. At the close of her lecture she received a superb bouquet.

The delegates of the New-York section of the Northeastern Saengerbund held a meeting at the Steuben House, in the Bowery, last night, Mr. THEODORE HEIDENFELD presiding. Lists showing the number of singers of the several societies composing the section were presented. A resolution was passed that the quarterly installments be paid by the active members of the several societies for defraying the expenses of the singing festival in the Summer of 1871, and a Committee was appointed in order to draft rules for the Saengerbund. The New-York section of the Northeastern Saengerbund, which is composed of a New-York, Philadelphia and Baltimore section, consists now of thirty-three German singing societies in this City and neighborhood.

The recent cold nights have filled the Hudson River with a large quantity of ice. Already ice men between Hudson and Albany are at work, but the ice gathered is of an inferior quality. They say that if the seasonable Governor had caused running through it they would now have a good supply. The last time that vessel went south ice men stood on the piers at Castleton and Athens, and hooted and yelled at her, and cites it was thought the progress of the vessel would be interfered with.

A freight train ran off the track yesterday at Rhinebeck, on the Hudson River Railroad, the cars obstructing both tracks, and seriously interfering with the running of regular passenger trains. So far as heard from no one was hurt.

NEW-JERSEY.

Late on Thursday night JAMES MAGEHAN and TERENCE REILLY attacked the residence of MARGARET SHEERAN, on Warren-street. After they had broken the doors and windows of the old woman's house, they struck her a violent blow with a missile on the head. After demolishing four other residences, and brutally assaulting their inmates, they broke into the saloon of MICHAEL MCCHRYSTAL, and were in the act of demolishing glasses and decanters, when they were captured by a posse of Police, but not without considerable trouble. Both parties are unfavorably known in Newark. They were committed to jail yesterday evening to await trial.

In the Hudson County Court, yesterday, a constable of Union township, named MICHAEL CASEY, was placed on trial on a charge of failing to serve a warrant issued by a Justice of the Peace for the arrest of a woman named DELIA PRICE, accused of assault and battery.
